Labor a Commodity
An Intelligent Wife
No Ford Bolshevism
Reducing American Wealth

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921

A decision of the Supreme Court, without saying it in so many words, seems to classify human labor as "an article or commodity of commerce," and workmen combining to obtain fair wages in return for their lives, which they sell to their employers, are classed by the Supreme Court with trust managers conspiring to monopolise markets, crush competitors and exploit the people.

Under the latest Supreme Court decision, which marks a big step forward in the open national crusade against union labor, unions are held accountable under trust laws, although the Clayton act expressly exempted them. Section 6 of the act says "the labor of a human being is not an article or commodity of commerce."

The decision of the court, of course, was not unanimous. When the constitution says that the bodies of laborers are no longer commodities, to be bought and sold, it is difficult to understand how the labor of the worker can be called a commodity like sugar, iron or copper.

What is the difference between a man's body and his labor?

If you control the labor, do you not control the body? If a man's labor is not free, if he may not combine with his fellows to protect it and obtain its full value, of what value is his so-called bodily freedom?

Mrs. Orren Fowler Sheafer, intelligent San Francisco lady, thought well of her husband, Orren, and had great respect for her most intimate lady friend, Mrs. Lily Fowler Ferris.

Realizing that she must say good-by to life and to her husband, Mrs. Sheafer bequeathed her husband to her good friend, Mrs. Ferris, and Mrs. Ferris is now the second Mrs. Sheafer.

How much more decent, human and generally respectable this is than a last will and testament in which a man so often says in substance, "To my faithful and beloved wife, so-and-so, I leave so many millions, but if she wants to be happy and marries again, she can't have a nickel."

Such a will puts a premium on immorality, and proves that the husband who makes the will never deserved a good wife. That kind of a husband is only a short distance from the man in India that had his living widow burned with his dead body, or the African savage that had an assortment of wives slaughtered and thrown into the grave with him.

Wise Mrs. Sheafer at least knew just how old and how pretty the second Mrs. Sheafer would be, and she picked out a lady that would take good care of her linen, all of which is comforting to a lady about to die.

Foolish gossip, in Detroit, announced that fifty thousand of Henry Ford's workers were trying to seize his plant, work it themselves and introduce Bolshevism.

The fifty thousand simply came to be paid off, on the temporary closing of the plant. One solitary policeman easily took care of the Bolshevism, for it had no existence.

Henry Ford, long before Bolshevism was invented, paid his men the highest wages voluntarily, without strikes or demands, and at the same time made his profit by huge productions, giving full value to the public.

Bolshevism won't take root and Sovietism won't grow where workers are well paid.

The South is planning to cut cotton production one-half. There seems no other way to raise the price of cotton to a point that will pay the cost of production.

But there ought to be some better way of solving a great problem, and the government ought to find it.

What would happen to the world if farmers cut down the production of milk, beef, wheat and corn 50 per cent. to make a living?

Or what would happen if all factories of clothing, pianos, steel, everything, cut production one-half?

The world needs every pound of cotton the South can produce and three times as much. Hundreds of millions are nearly naked. It is simply a question of adjusting credits.

Cotton is a crop that can be kept indefinitely, that will always have its value, like gold or silver. There should be enough intelligence, business ability and good will in the government to save the South from great loss and sacrifice and the world from the loss of cotton, every pound of which it needs.

It should not be forgotten by government, which is responsible for "labor unrest" and other disturbing possibilities, that to cut cotton production 50 per cent. means cutting employment in the South at least 30 per cent. "Other crops" will not take up the slack.

And cutting down the demand for labor means lowering the wages of those that are hired: "supply and demand" take care of that.

It is the beginning of a vicious circle, and government intelligence should find some way to avoid it. In such a case an intelligent autocrat would say to his slaves, "You go ahead and produce the cotton. I'll attend to financing it until it is distributed."

Democratic government should be at least as efficient as intelligent autocracy.

NEW MOVE FOR IRISH PEACE

'PEOPLE ROBBED BY COAL MEN'

Fuel Administrator Hultman Says Consumers Have Lost Million in Poor Fuel

That consumers in Massachusetts have been "mulcted out of millions of dollars" by the poor quality of coal sold them, as well as having been required to pay excessive prices for the fuel itself, was the statement made today by Eugene C. Hultman, fuel administrator, in his report to the incoming legislature.

To do away with this situation as far as possible, it is recommended that the Legislature confer upon the administrator the power of requiring dealers to submit all their invoices and other papers to him, just as is now done in the case of dealers in foodstuffs and a number of other necessaries of life.

The administrator makes this request, after pointing out that for the next several years there is likely to be no supervision over coal shippers in view of the fact that the government has ordered the separation of the companies from the railroads which up to now have controlled them.

When this separation is brought about the control now exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission will have come to an end. For the same reason the administrator also asked that the life of the fuel administration be continued. Under the law the administration would go out of existence this year.

The report states that an adequate supply of domestic fuel for Massachusetts is assured for the present Winter. This is due to the fact that production at the mines is normal and that shipments on the railroads are the same, the latter being due to the fact that the railroads can haul the coal now that industrial depression

Admits Wade Confession

Above, Mrs. Ellwood B. Wade, wife of the murder suspect, who says that duty, not love, keeps her at her husband's side. Below is Miss Pauline Bopko, one of the witnesses at the death trial.

Bridgeport, Ct., Jan. 5.—The State scored in the trial of Elwood B. Wade for the murder of George B. Nott today, when Judge George F. Hinman ruled that Wade's written and signed confession might be admitted as evidence.

Counsel for the defendant fought this move all day yesterday, and Judge Hinman postponed a ruling until this morning to make sure the confession was voluntary.

In the extraordinary document Wade told in some detail of the killing and the burying of the body in a swamp ten miles from the Nott home.

One passage from the confession caused the well-dressed women spectators to pale slightly, as it was read in the pitiless monotone of a court official. It was Wade, telling the police what the murdered man's wife said as the body lay at the foot of the stairs.

"Mrs. Nott reassured us," ran the confession.

"She said he was only a dirty gambler, anyhow, and nobody would do anything about his disappearance."

WIDOW RECOVERED.

Mrs. Ethel H. Nott, who had recovered from her collapse of yesterday, sat with bowed head and twitching lips as the statement was read.

She did not look at Wade, with whom she is jointly accused of having

1,000 REPORTED LOCKED OUT BY CLOTHING TRADE

The first round of the battle in Boston for the open shop in the clothing industry in this city took place when more than 1,000 workers were locked out of three of the largest manufacturing plants in the city, according to officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. They said the lockout took place when the employes refused to subscribe to the alleged arbitrary terms laid down by the Boston Clothing Manufacturers' Association. These called for a reduction in wages of from $5 to $10 a week, it was said, with a warning that there would be no further dealings with the union.

Ring on Finger of Woman in Dorchester Bay Bears Initials "B. H."

Description of woman found floating in Dorchester Bay:

Apparently about forty-five years old, five feet six inches tall, and weighing about 125 pounds.

Her clothing was of fashionable cut and material. She wore a three-quarter length brown chevlot coat, and a black dress of serge. Her hat was a brown turban.

On her right hand she wore a plain gold wedding ring, and on the third finger of her left hand was a signet ring bearing the initials "B. H."

Though the police are investigating the mystery which led to the discovery of the body of a well-dressed woman floating in Dorchester Bay between the South Boston Yacht Club and the Public Landing, South Boston, early today, nothing has come to light to aid them.

The body, apparently that of a woman approximately 45 years old,

Springfield Wins Third 'Loveliest Girl' Prize

Mrs. Olga Beata Atkins of No. 73 Bowles street, Springfield, won third prizes, $500 in gold, in the Boston Americans' Loveliest Girl Contest.

The first three of the four prizes in this remarkable competition were awarded to married women. The fact that a contestant was married or unmarried did not help or hurt her chances. Nor was there any age limit.

Each competitor was carefully and painstakingly appraised on her merits as to beauty, personality, health and intelligence. Those were the major requirements, but the fact that, after the final elimination, married women were found in the first three places, was interpreted by the judges as a tribute to matrimony.

And the winner of the fourth prizes is engaged. Her name and picture will be published in tomorrow's issues of the Boston American.

DANIELS DENIES PACT WITH CANADIAN NAVY

Washington, Jan. 5.—The United States has no plans for a naval alliance with Canada in the Pacific, Secretary Daniels stated today. Reports in London have stated that the new Canadian navy is to co-operate with the United States navy in the Pacific, using American naval bases. These reports are entirely unfounded, Daniels said.

LONDON DENIES BUILDING WARSHIPS FOR JAPAN

London, Jan. 5.—Official denial was issued today that any warships are being built in England for Japan. It was admitted, however, that some armor plate is being constructed here for the Japanese government. It had previously been reported that Japan had placed large orders in Great Britain for warships, guns and airplanes.

1000 Pay $100 Each at Hoover Dinner

One thousand Boston people will pay at least $100 each to partake of a frugal meal, served in tin dishes on plain deal tables in Symphony Hall, Thursday evening, January 13.

Hundreds of others will fill the balconies of the hall as spectators of this unique dinner and will pay $25 to $15 for the privilege.

The dinner will be, without doubt, the most unusual meal ever served in the city. The diners and the spectators—representatives of the city's society, business and professional life—will be in full evening dress, a direct contrast of the fare and the manner in which it will be served.

"INVISIBLE" GUEST OF HONOR.

Governor-elect Cox—he will then be Governor—and Mayor Peters will be guests at the dinner. So will Herbert Hoover and President Faunce of Brown University.

But none of these will be the guest of honor. This distinction is reserved for an unoccupied baby's chair, symbolical of the invisible guest—the 3,500,000 starving children of Central and Eastern Europe, whose emaciated bodies and wan faces are turned to America for help.

In many respects the dinner and program to follow will be similar to

SIX POLICEMEN HAVE RESIGNED

Leave Fields Corner and East Boston as New Year Party Result

Six Boston policemen, five attached to the Fields Corner station and the other to East Boston, have resigned.

News of their resignation was sent all divisions in a general order labelled "Not for the Press."

The resignations resulted from a New Year's party.

The men who resigned are: William A. Brown, Daniel G. Kendrick, Albert Reed, Joseph Reed and Herbert Rourke, all of the Fields Corner Station, and James H. Slavin of the East Boston station.

According to the story reported to headquarters by Captain James F. Hickey, of East Boston, Slavin was sent in to the station early on New Year's morning intoxicated.

He stated he had received the liquor from some men in an automobile. Further investigation resulted in the discovery that the men in the automobile were policemen assigned to the Dorchester station.

Following an investigation ordered from headquarters charges were preferred against all concerned.

Balloonists Narrowly Escaped Icy Death

By International News Service.

Cochrane, Ont., Jan. 5.—A bare sixty minutes stood between the three American balloonists of the A-5598 and death when they landed in the Canadian wilderness on December 14.

If they had continued their flight another hour they would have been over James Bay, where a landing meant certain death amidst the ice wastes. The balloonists told their guides that they considered it an act of God that they had landed where they did, and subsequently made their way to safety.

These and other details of the adventures of Lieutenants Walter Hinton, Stephen A. Farrell and Louis A. Kloor, Jr., were received today out of the North, where the men are making their way back to the doorstep of civilization.

THRILLING STORY.

A thrilling story is bound up in a brief account of the men's rescue just received here from the Anglican minister at Moose Factory, the Hudson Bay Company trading post at the estuary of the Moose River on James Bay, where the aeronauts were cared for until they could begin their journey to the nearest railway.

When the men landed fifteen miles northwest of Moose Factory, after a twenty-four hours' flight from Rockaway, N. Y., they did not know where they were, but believed that they were somewhere over the northern end of New York State.

They had been flying at tremendous altitude, and owing to thick clouds and snow they could not see the land beneath them.

As the balloon neared James Bay it descended somewhat, and the men thought they heard a dog barking in

JURY UPHOLDS NEW RENT LAW

First Test Case Results in Victory for Measure Backed by Boston American

Victory crowned the first real test case of the new rent laws passed through the efforts of the Boston American.

The first case to go before a jury under the new laws, the passage of which was facilitated by the formation of the Boston American Tenants' League, resulted in the jury putting its seal of approval on the 25 per cent. increase law.

The case was that of Philip Finer, a landlord, against Mrs. N. Whittemore, a tenant, at No. 120 Peterboro street, Back Bay, and was heard in the Superior Court by Judge Keating and a jury.

Mrs. Whittmore refused to pay an increase of more than 25 per cent. She received two notices to quit, one from Fiener, in whose name the property stands, and one from Louis S. Koufman of Dorchester, who really owns it. She refused to move. Feiner brought suit to evict her.

In the Roxbury Municipal Court the magistrate found for the landlord and the case was taken before a jury. Mrs. Whittmore has not paid the increased rent since June 1. The jury found for her.

BRITISH LEADERS CHANGE FRONT

Decide Irish Murder Suspects Need Not Be Surrendered Before Peace Parleys

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 5.—Irish peace negotiations took a most important turn today when the Irish office announced it would not demand the surrender of alleged Irish murderers before the peace discussions are concluded, but instead would turn over their names and records to the South Ireland Parliament, leaving the new Irish government to deal with them.

This was a complete face-about from the previous att[illegible] of the British government. The government had previously announced that the Republicans wanted on murder charges would have to be surrendered before the peace discussions could be continued.

This statement was coincident with reports of fresh and furious outbreaks of fighting in Ireland as a result of which 15 Sinn Feiners were said to have been killed at Meelin, County Cork, and 13 police and civilians wounded at Parnell Bridge, Cork.

EXPECT "COMPROMISE."

Officials of the Irish office expressed belief that a compromise movement from Eamon De Valera is imminent.

The South Ireland Parliament has not yet been established. It is provided for in the Home Rule bill.

Advices from Dublin report that it is probable Dail Eireann, the Sinn Fein Parliament, will convene at the end of this week.

De Valera is expected to issue a statement within 24 hours addressed to "All Irishmen, at home and abroad." The contents have not been revealed.

The suggestion that De Valera ad-

WADE'S CONFESSION TELLS DETAILS OF THE KILLING OF NOTT

SAYS WIFE CALLED SLAIN MAN A 'DIRTY GAMBLER'

killed her husband, for which she will be tried later.

Wade was as debonair as ever, and appearently quite surprised by the commotion he caused yesterday when he forcibly kissed Mrs. Nott in the presence of his own wife.

He nodded politely to his wife today, as he might have done to a stranger. He made no demonstration of affection. Neither did she. She stated that duty, not love, keeps her at her husband's side in his trial.

John Edward Johnston, the third person charged with the murder of Nott, sat close to Mrs. Nott and a few feet from the Wade family. He also will be tried later.

Wade's confession began with his acquaintance with Mrs. Nott a year ago. He said they were introduced by his wife. Their friendship grew rapidly. Soon they were meeting and dining together downtown.

CARRIED WEAPONS.

The morning of the murder he was called on the telephone by Mrs. Nott's small daughter, Gertrude. She told him there had been "great trouble" at her house, and her mother wanted him to come over.

He went, with Johnston, younger than himself, and his unquestioning friend.

Wade said he carried a revolver and a piece of iron pipe. Johnston had a hatchet. They did not intend to use the weapons unless it was necessary.

Mrs. Nott told them her husband had beaten her. She wished Wade had been there to prevent it. Wade resolved to "give Nott a beating," but was going to wait until he came downstairs.

Wade's confession continued that, growing impatient, they sent Gertrude up to see if her father was asleep. She reported he was not. Then Wade decided to go up to the room.

Nott told them to get out of the house. Johnston ran. Wade and Nott grappled.

Wade's story of the killing was scanty, although he admitted that he did it. He said he thought it was his life or the other man's. He used the lead pipe and the gun, and finally the butcher knife, which Mrs. Nott handed him. It was she suggested the body be packed in the trunk.

Together they packed the body, he said. That night he and Johnston returned with a truck, took the trunk to a swamp ten miles away and tried to sink it.

After the reading of the confession Police Captain John H. Reagan took the stand. He said when Wade was arrested he acted as f he had only ordinary matters on his mind."

He said Wade identified the butcher knife and revolver, and later went to the Nott home in Judson avenue and told the story of the killing.

FIND PHOTOGRAPH.

Captain Reagan testified that after finding the trunk in the Easton swamp he sent officers with rakes to search the swamp for further evidence. They found a cabinet photograph of Mrs. Nott.

Wade explained to him that it was thrown on top of the blankets and curtains with which the body was concealed, with the idea that if some curious person opened the trunk he or she would see the photograph and conclude it was an ordinary trunk filled with ordinary household "junk."

Again the fashionably gowned women shuddered as they pictured the photograph of the false wife in the trun with the butchered body of her husband.

Attorney William H. Comley took Reagan in cross-examination and tried to show that Wade was irrational when he made his confession.

vised a compromise with the English government and the acceptance of the Home Rule bill is authoritatively denied. On the contrary it is stated by Sinn Fein leaders that De Valera is hostile to the Home Rule act.

The new violence followed the extension of the martial law zone to include the counties of Clare, Waterford, Wexford and Kilkenny and the city of Waterford.

Residents of Cork were terrorized by the shooting and resultant police activities, and fears were freely expressed that the British troops would make official reprisals by burning homes.

BATTLE FOLLOWS AMBUSH.

The battle of Meelin, which was not confirmed by the Irish office, was said to have followed an attempt to ambush several lorries filled with crown forces who were proceeding toward Cork.

Sinn Fein attackers used machine guns as well as rifles in the attack, according to information given out by officers attached to British military headquarters.

According to this account the battle was a severe one and lasted for some time, but the Sinn Feiners escaped. The attackers are believed to have suffered casualties.

The lorries were preceded by advance guards, who, at a turn in the road, discovered a screen of bushes with what seemed to be newly-made trenches behind. A shot rang out from this screen, immediately returned by the advance guards.

The troops in the lorries then got into action, sweeping the thicket flanking the roadway with a heavy fire.

The soldiers were then formed on the road, and charged their attackers with fixed bayonets. The Sinn Feiners, said to have been armed only with revolvers, were no match for the troops, and the majority who were not killed were surrounded. Some of them managed to break through the lines and escaped.

The Parnell Bridge outbreak occurred when a bomb was thrown while a detachment of policemen were crossing the bridge. Six of them were said to have been wounded by the bomb, but their comrades opened fire with machine guns and rifles. Seven civilians fell, of whom five were reported to be in a serious condition in Cork hospitals.

Th police were active in Dublin today, Black and Tans searching all the houses in Mill street. All the males were arrested, although seven were later released. Families were compelled to give up firearms.

"If the negotiations are arranged they will refer to new amendments to the new Home Rule act granting an extension of powers to the Irish for self-government. A definite move may be made within the next few days. It is now known to the government that De Valera is in Dublin.

"It is stated authoritatively that De Valera, upon his return to Dublin, traveled as an ordinary passenger in a trolley car in the heart of the city. He was recognised."

The leaders of the Irish Republican army at Cork distributed leaflets throughout the city calling upon the people to ignore the order of "the self-styled bulldog governor of Cork," for all heads of household to supply him with a list of residents of each dwelling. The leaflet concludes: "Let the agent of the tyrant do his own clerking."

the woods beneath them. This led them to believe that they were near a settlement or at least a homestead, and they decided to make earth.

The balloon touched land at 1:30 in the afternoon of December 14, and then the troubles of the balloonists began in earnest. It took them only a short time to realise that they were lost in a primeval forest, uninhabited except by wild animals.

Throughout the afternoon and night of the 14th the men trudged through the snow. Fortunately, there was little if any frost in the air.

ATE TWO PIGEONS.

They had taken with them all the provisions left on the baloon, including the three carrier pigeons.

On the 16th the men began to despair. They realized they were lost and began to fear that they would perish in the wilderness. By this time all the food had been eaten, and two of the three carrier pigeons were killed and eaten.

(The account fails to say what happened to the third pigeon. It is possible that it may have been released with a message and lost its way. This part of the dramatic story will not be revealed until the men reach the railhead either here or at Mattice.)

On the 17th, just as the men had about decided to abandon themselves to their fate, they reached Moose River. Sight of the river gave them fresh hope. They believed if there was any settlement at all in the wilderness it would be upon a stream of water.

Plunging through the deep snow, falling, tottering and exhausted with fatigue, the balloonists finally discovered tracks in the snow.

Their hope was strengthened and they fought their way forward with renewed confidence.

FRIGHTEN INDIAN.

After a tortuous journey the men came upon an Indian trapper getting his Winter catch for sale to the Hudson Bay Company in the Spring.

This Indian, Tom Marks by name, was on a hunting expedition and was looking after his traps. When he caught sight of the three white men he was overcome with fright and disappeared in the brush.

Two of the men wore uniforms of the United States naval air force. The third was in his underwear. All were nearly spent and showed marks of exposure and starvation.

(The fact that only two of the three men wore uniforms is another part of the narrative that has not yet been cleared up.)

The men kept on and finally reached Moose Factory, more dead than alive. Their appearance at the trading post caused a great sensation among the employes of the little store and fort, especially among the few superstitious Indians who looked upon the white men as spirits out of the air.

TWENTY-FOUR HOURS' REST.

The Hudson Bay employes took the Americans in and gave them the best of care. They were put to bed under layers of thick, warm furs and hot drinks were administered. After a long sleep they were given a hearty meal and at the end of twenty-four hours were ready to start for the edge of the white man's world.

The traders at the post were astonished to learn that the balloonists had left New York only a few days before, and, in fact, this furnished one of the most dramatic features of the entire adventure. Within a short twenty-four hours the men had passed from the metropolis of the Eastern world—New York city—to the heart of a virgin wilderness.

From a city teeming with life and the seat of railway, steamship and street car lines to the midst of a desolate land untrodden by the foot of man and without any of the necessities or comforts of a civilised land.

A party of trappers set out December 18 to recover the balloon, but the men returned saying that it could not be carried through the deep snow.

WIRES RESCUE.

The Hudson Bay employes at the request of the Americans then sent out one of their best voyageurs to Mattice to send a telegram to New York announcing the safe arrival of the Americans. Lieutenant Kloor wrote the message and this telegram was the first word that the world had of the rescue of the balloonists.

Plans were then made for a second expedition for the balloon later on.

After resting over Christmas in the trading post, where they had a feast of venison steak, the Americans set out in sledges guided by Indian runners.

(According to the Anglican minister's account the men were leaving Moose Factory December 26, but the Americans had reported in their telegram of last Sunday to the Rockaway naval authorities that they would depart December 27.)

The Rev. Hawthorne Waite, the Anglican minister at Moose Factory, quoted the balloonists as saying that they could have stayed in the air only a few hours longer as they had thrown out all their ballast.

Wanted--a Motto for Fire Department

Boston's Fire Department lacks a motto.

The Fire Commissioner has issued an appeal to the public and the members of the force to send in suggestions for one with a punch.

The department needs something that will sum up the fighting spirit of the corps.

All suggestions should be forwarded to the Fire Commissioner on Bristol street, not later than February 15.

PEOPLE ROBBED BY POOR FUEL

Hultman Says Poor Quality and Excessive Prices Have Caused Loss of Millions has cut into their ordinary business.

Commenting upon the poor quality of coal sold to Massachusetts consumers, Mr. Hultman says:

"In addition to the high prices, Massachusetts has been mulcted of millions of dollars by the poor quality coal that has been dumped into this market.

"Coal transportation rates have been paid in large quantities of slate, bone and rock, especially in coal purchased from speculative sources. Producers should not have been permitted to sell as coal mixtures containing such a large percentage of so-called 'impurities.'

"The anthracite situation is further complicated by the fact that there is no binding contractual relation between producer, wholesaler, retailer and household to ensure delivery; no public agency to control either the price or distribution; and no bureau to ascertain fact or disseminate information.

DIFFICULT SITUATION.

"The whole anthracite situation for several years will probably be more difficult in the past on account of the divorce of the so-called company mines from the railroad."

Following are the present prices per gross ton f. o. b. mine for "company" coal, which represents approximately 75 per cent. of the total production, and these figures, says the administrator, will probably prevail until April 1, 1921:

Domestic sizes Egg $7.70; broken $7.70, stove $7.95, chestnut $8.00, pea $6.25, steam sizes, buckwheat No. 1 $4.25, No. 2 $3.20, No. 3 $3.40.

Shipping costs from the mines to Massachusetts points range between $4.27 and $5.31 a ton.

Since the administration has turned over to the Congressional Committee which has been investigating the price of coal, all the data it has collected on the subject, the price of fuel for immediate delivery, the kind dealt in by speculators, has dropped to $11 a ton. The rate at the time just before the inquiry had been as high as $15.75.

HOOVER DINNER $100 A PLATE

the "invisible guest" dinner given December 29 at the Hotel Commodore, New York, when one thousand New York men and women contributed $3,011,321 to eat the meal which is served to the suffering children by the European Relief Council of America.

MANY TABLES RESERVED.

The fare in New York consisted of a stew, rice, bread and cocoa. The dinner to be served in Boston will be practically the same and will cost but a few cents to prepare.

Already many of the tables have been reserved by representative Bostonians. At each table will be ten guests and each of these 100 tables will represent a donation to the relief fund of at least $1,000.

Each seat in the first balcony of the hall will represent a contribution or pledge of $25 and each seat in the second balcony will represent a contribution or pledge of $15.

Herbert Hoover, who heads the American campaign collecting funds for the relief of the children, will tell of the immediate need for American help for the pitiful refugees of the war and will tell of the manner in which they are being fed.

MOVIES TO BE SHOWN.

The manner in which the children are fed will be shown by a moving picture film taken at one of the feeding stations.

Also, supplementing the speaking, will be a musical program by the Harvard Glee Club and by famous stars from the Metropolitan Opera Company. Malcolm Lang will preside at the organ.

Plans for the dinner are fast being made by a committee of the Massachusetts branch of the European Relief Council of which John W. Hallowell is chairman. C. F. Weed is chairman of the dinner committee and is being assisted by many prominent men and women who are devoting their entire time to make the dinner a success.

SOCIETY PEOPLE IN CHARGE.

Robert S. Weeks is in charge of the hall and seating arrangements; E. F. Cullen of food and supplies, and Mrs. Barrett Wendell heads the committee on women's activities. Among the society women on this committee are Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, Miss Dorothy Forbes and Mrs. Francis E. Gray.

The diners will be served on tin mess dishes, donated by the First Army Corps. The waitresses will be young society women.

There will be no expense to the relief committee for the dinner. All the food, the hall and the entertainment is being donated by Massachusetts people interested in the cause of the starving children.

Report De Valera Sailed From Portland

Portland, Me., Jan. 5.—Reports that Eamon de Valera sailed from this port on the steamer Canadian Runner, which cleared December 19, are being circulated here. It was learned that the steamer was throughly searched upon its arrival in Dublin. It was further stated that many men known to be sympathisers with the cause of Irish freedom were in a group on the wharf here when the steamer moved out in the stream.

It was pointed out that it would have been an simple matter for the captain to have engaged a valet or assistant without requiring the latter to sign the ship's articles.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN DORCHESTER BAY was found by Patrolman William Mutz of the City Point Station as he was patrolling on Columbia road.

It was picked up by the police boat Watchman, sent to the spot as soon as Mutz had notified headquarters.

Investigation at the station revealed the fact that all identifying clews had been ripped from the clothing.

There was complete absence of bruises or abrasions that would have indicated a struggle, but the detectives at work on the case are not satisfied that it was suicide.

Officers have been detailed in an effort to find anyone who saw a woman answering the description of the dead woman in the vicinity of the spot where the body was found.

Doctors who have examined the body are confident that it could not have been in the water for any length of time, and this leads the police to the belief that the woman was thrown or jumped into the bay near the place where Patrolman Mutz found her body floating.

The body has been removed to the Northern Mortuary.

MARRIED PASTOR'S LOVE LETTERS REVEALED IN GIRL'S SU

REV. DENSEL QUOTED BIBLE IN WOOING OF SINGER

Passaic, N. J., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Cornelius Densel, wife of the Rev. Cornelius Densel who was arrested here on a charge of seduction under promise of marriage by Miss Trina Hannenberg, announced today that she will sue Miss Hannenberg for $50,000 for alleged alienation of her husband's affections.

This announcement, which came from one of Mrs. Densel's sons, is the first statement that has been issued from the former pastor's home since he was arrested and later released when he furnished a cash bond of $3,000.

Mrs. Densel has engaged William H. Ely of Rutherford, N. J., to press her alienation suit and papers will be filed immediately, her son said. Dominie Densel, forty-eight years old and the father of eight children, would not make any comment on the action of his wife, or the action of Miss Hannenberg who yesterday brought suit against him for $25,000 on the alleged grounds that he betrayed her and thereby defamed her name.

Since the moment of his return on the night of December 5, last, in company with Miss Hannenberg, after an absence of almost one month, the former pastor of the New Netherlands Reformed Church of this city has maintained strict silence concerning his trip with Miss Hannenberg.

URGED TO KEEP SILENT.

It has been learned upon good authority that certain powerful members of the church consistory are responsible for his silence. Beyond appearing before the members of his church and asking forgiveness for his actions Mr. Densel has consistently refused to make any statements.

In reply to a question, Miss Hannenberg stated today that she had brought suit against the former minister after giving him practically a month to make good his promise to divorce his wife and marry her. She said that Densel had been in love with her for about seven years, and when told that Mrs. Densel was going to sue her for vamping her husband Miss Hannenberg showed great indignation.

"Why he always told me that it was the Lord's will that he should love me. It was he and not me that brought on the relations that existed between us. I have always been very religious and I was influenced by him because he was my spiritual leader. I did not vamp him," she declared.

The girl's attorneys, Weinberg & Weinberg of this city, described Mrs. Densel's action in bringing suit against their client as laughable in face of existing conditions.

TRIED TO AVOID PASTOR.

"She has him under her own roof. He came back and was forgiven and received by his wife and children. There is little room to see where his affections have been really alienated. As for Miss Hannenberg, she stoutly maintains that she always tried to avoid him until he convinced her that it was God's will that they love each other," said Robert Weinberg.

Four letters which Miss Hannenberg says were written by Densel to her were offered by the attorneys as an indication of the way that their client was influenced by her pastor. The letters read as follows:

Passaic, N. J., Sept. 3, 1920.

Dearest:

Peace, peace unto you!

Enclosed I am sending you the list of names which you determined to visit, with all my heart I hope you may be successful. If, don't get enough, don't let it discourage you. The Lord knows what is good. Nothing happens by chance, but all things befall us from His fatherly hand. This not only applies to the little organ matter, but to our whole outward and inward life.

Have you already attentively read the little booklet Dthenus? I hope the Lord will give you enlightened eyes to understand the beauty of the doctrine of truth, as was given to me while reading it. God be with you!

I am as ever yours in Christ.

Passaic, N. J., Sept. 17, 1920.

TELLS HER OF SIGNAL.

Dearest Trina:

A few lines just to let you know that I held a meeting with the deacons concerning those organs. We decided to take the $450 one.

Did you exert yourself a little too much last night? Didn't you injure your conscience? This so easily happens at parties. Still I realize it was in behalf of our dear Lena. I know that you personally don't care for those kind of recreations.

I hope to see you tomorrow in our house of prayer. If everything is all right just place your kerchief in front of your cute little nose a little while, then I'll know the rest!

The Lord grant you an attentive heart and a blessing.

I am, as ever,

Yours,

REV. C. DENSEL.

P. S.—Write me a few lines and hand it to me tomorrow afternoon!!!

Passaic, N. J., Nov. 4, 1920.

Dearest Wife:

In haste I'm sending you a few lines before you retire with a heavy heart. It is perhaps better before you retire to let you know that everything ran off smoothly this afternoon. When I met her and told her that I was there to obtain the license for Lena, she said: "Had you only told me that because I do not wish to mingle with your personal affairs."

SHUN EVIL APPEARANCES.

In return I answered that I delighted in her apology, but that in the future would not await such. Whereupon she testified to me that she would allow me liberty in my actions if I would beware of such things which would result in a resignation. Naturally I could give my consent to this with all my heart.

I told her that we both would look out for that, because if we had not esteemed my gospel service just as highly we would have already long ago changed our profession. That we are both shunning the appearance of evil even to such an extent that we even avoid that to which we have a right.

I think that this tiding will cause you to rejoice. At least it does me. She told me now that she knows it can't last very long any more, and asks me if after her demise I would justly conduct myself concerning my remarriage and the children. You understand that I answered in the affirmative, and with a good conscience. Therefore, instead of more trouble, I've obtained more rest. Also as regards good will and pleasure.

I hope that I might meet you next Monday afternoon on the corner at 1:30. We will be back soon. Or if you must go along Monday afternoon for the license, let me know then and I will be by the City Hall and from there we can go together to Newark and back. It will be an easy matter for you to tell Lena that you have some matter to transact with me. She'll know how to fix it up with Jacob.

ENJOYED HER COMPANY.

If you, therefore, have to go along for the license just tell me when you will be there then I will take the license along upstairs in the library of the City Hall to write down a few answers to the questions which need filling out. Give that note along with your father tomorrow night. He can hand it to me either going out or in.

I'm strengthened wonderfully by our mutual agreement. I've enjoyed your company yesterday. You understand me, don't you dear. And today again is evidence to me the good hand of God over us.

Receive as ever in thought, many kisses.

From your loving,

HUSBAND.

Passaic, N. J., Oct. 15, 1920.

My Beloved in the Lord:

According to promise I will send you a few lines before Sunday to, the Lord willing, establish the necessary calmness and reliance in your soul concerning our affairs. I know and feel that you need this very much and you will need it in the future.

"SOUL'S EXPERIENCE."

You know that I have a feeling for you, and in your heart for me. That is not from today or yesterday but for a long time. Ours has become a seasoned affection so that we have become very intimate. While we must shun all appearances of evil, we cannot as yet, according to the desire of our heart, enjoy the continued company of one another.

People are so apt to give vent to slander, which would disgrace your and my name. Especially would the name of God be dishonored if accusation of carnal mindedness would be brought against us. Therefore I think the manner of our conduct of life is the only and best way way in order to avoid notoriety. In my lonesomeness, I can especially recommend our affairs to the Lord with boldness and fervent supplications.

I hope to meet you at the usual time and usual place in good health.

The Lord bless you, my dear, with his blessings.

As ever yours.

According to a statement made by Miss Hannenberg it appears that her former pastor had been making overtures to her ever since she came to this country from Holland to be his servant, seven years ago. But it was not until September 20, last, that he ever intimated marriage, she said.

"He gave me a ring, a wedding ring, on September 20. He told me I was married to him before God, and that he didn't live with his wife any more. To him she was only the mother of his children. He told me if I took it off I would break the law with the Lord.

STAYED AT HOTEL.

"We went to Buffalo on November 12 and stopped at the hotel McLeod, he said he would have a divorce in two weeks' time. His son, Richard, was to mail it to him. He also promised he would get $5,000. He broke every promise to me."

FIGHTS QUINCY 'DEATH TRAP'

Mayor Bradford Takes Action on Fatal Railroad Crossing Accident

Mayor William A. Bradford of Quincy today began an attempt to prevent further loss of life at the Quincy station of the New Haven Railroad, where one man was killed and another was probably fatally injured in a train accident.

He conferred with City Solicitor John W. McAnarney as to what course the city should pursue to eliminate this "Death Trap," where many persons have been killed or maimed for life because of carelessness and the hazards afforded.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUSY.

The Chamber of Commerce has taken up the popular demand that something be done. Following an address by Mayor Bradford, in which he severely excoriated the railroad, the Chamber of Commerce voted to co-operate with him in his efforts.

Mayor Bradford said he understood that it was a rule of the New Haven that trains must not pass another train while it is discharging or receiving passengers. "If that is the case," said the Mayor, "something must be done to force the railroad to enforce its rules. I propose to do all in my power to remedy the situation."

After sixteen years of delay by the New Haven road and Quincy city officials a definite start was made today toward eliminating the dangerous conditions at this spot.

PLOWS THROUGH CROWD.

The climax came when a Middleboro express, outbound, plowed through a crowd of Fore River shipyard employes attempting to board the Fore River special from Quincy to Boston.

Hervert Melville, aged thirty-two, of No. 1 Fuller street, Dorchester, was instantly killed, his body being terribly mangled under the engine of the express.

Salvatore Mignosa, of No. 3 South Market street, Boston, was internally injured. His name is on the danger list at the Quincy Hospital.

Brookline Wins Prize As Quietest Town

Brookline has gone on record as the quietest town in the State.

During the first four days of the New Year not an arrest or fire has been recorded.

Neither has there been a marriage, nor a birth. The town clerk has not issued a marriage license for several weeks.

"When will something happen" is the query now on the lips of police and fire officials, as well as citizens.

BISHOP URGES CHURCH UNION

Parker of New Hampshire Would Begin With Protestant Episcopal and Greek

Philadelphia, Jan. 5.—Merger of Protestant Episcopal with the Greek Orthodox faith as the first step in the final union of all Christian beliefs, was urged today by Bishop Edward M. Parker, of New Hampshire, speaking in the Church of the Advent, the house of worship for Russian Christians, at Fifth and Brown streets.

"The union or merger of all the various branches of Christian belief would be a great thing," said Bishop Parker, "but at the best it will take years and years of prayer, teaching and unselfish sacrifice to bring about this happy consummation.

"The Protestant Episcopal church, containing as it does elements of both the Roman Catholic ritual and the beliefs of the Protestant sects, seems to be the readiest and most effective instrument in beginning such a union."

Grenfell Cancels Talk

The scheduled appearance of Dr. W. T. Grenfell at the Harvard Union tomorrow night has been canceled. The doctor has promised to speak on his experiences some time next Spring.

SHOE WORKERS OPPOSE CUT

Lynch Warns of Clash if Try Is Made for Wage Drop or Open Shop

Clashes between labor and capital next Spring are certain if manufacturers of shoes attempt to force through plans for establishing the open shop or reducing wages, according to Thomas F. Lynch, secretary-treasurer of the United Shoe Workers of America, given at a meeting of the executive board of the union at Rochester, New York.

"We are not inviting trouble," said Mr. Lynch, "but we are not running away from it either. Labor is entitled to its fair share of the products of industry, and the purpose of the United Shoe Workers is to see that this is obtained.

"You cannot accuse us of radicalism. We maintain that labor puts as much investment into industry as does capital. Labor puts youth and life into the product. It is entitled to a greater proportion of the profits than it now receives."

Lynch outlined plans for bringing about a working alliance between independent labor groups in the United States.

He pointed out that there are large numbers of workers outside the American Federation of Labor, and said efforts are being made to bring these into "one big union."

The United Shoe Workers, he added, has a membership of 45,000, and has virtually controlled the St. Louis, Chicago, New York, Rochester, Philadelphia, Lynn, Salem and Manchester markets.

"I look for an early resumption of business in all markets," said Lynch. "Retailers are showing more interest in the output of manufacturers, and normal relations are coming back."

College Lectures Postponed

3RD PRIZE TO SPRINGFIELD

Mrs. Atkins Receives $500 Award in Boston American's Loveliest Girl Contest with the names and addresses of seven other candidates, whose high type of loveliness earned for them a place on the honor roll.

AIDS HUSBAND AS MASON.

Mrs. Atkins is twenty-one years of age. She married a veteran of the World War last July. She is a hairdresser, and has been conducting a business of her own for four years. She says she will set aside $300 of her prize money to advance her husband in Masonry. She said that amount would make him a Shriner. She will use another $100 to develop an invention which greatly simplifies her work of hair-dressing. She has applied for a patent.

Mrs. Atkins is a striking type of blonde, so striking that while attending high school she posed for local photographers and for Artist Sheldon of Springfield. Her choice for third honors was unanimous.

It is no secret that the judges in the Loveliest Girl Contest agreed that Mrs. Atkins possessed rare facial beauty, perhaps the greatest of any of the winners, but they decided that Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr., of Boston, winner of the first prize of $3,000 in gold, and Mrs. Lola C. Seimmon, winner of the second prize of $1,000, outpointed her in educational achievements and in general animation and appearance.

Mrs. Atkins has rich blonde hair, large blue eyes which are very expressive, perfect features, and the dainty, fresh complexion common to those of her extraction. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson, both of whom were born in Sweden. The parents own the two-family house in which Mr. and Mrs. Atkins live. The young couple live down stairs and the bride's father and mother occupy the upper flat. Bowles street is in a delightful residential section in the north end of Springfield.

VISITS FASHIONABLE WOMEN.

Mrs. Atkins was born in Springfield. She was graduated from Buckingham Grammar School and Springfield Technical High School. Then she studied hair-dressing for two years. She visits the homes of her customers, who are among the most fashionable women in the city. Lack of suitable equipment in the homes visited inspired Mrs. Atkins to invent a portable shampooing contrivance. Her father made it from her drawing. It doesn't weigh more than a pound.

This little invention is an index to the resourcefulness of the girl. She is reserved and undemonstrative, but shows by her conversation great depth of mind. She is five feet seven inches in height, weighs 135 pounds and is athletic. The winners of the first three prizes are almost the same height and build. Mrs. Seimmon and Mrs. Atkins are a trifle slimmer than Mrs. Tufts, winner of the first prize.

Mrs. Atkins is fond of outdoor life. It is impossible to reproduce in a photograph the exquisite coloring of her complexion, eyes and hair. She is ambitious and studious. She is a thorough business woman, and began to manifest her business traits while in school. She is busy every day except Sunday and thoroughly enjoys her work. She says daily contact with intellectual women is most profitable and lightens her work, which at times is extremely arduous.

Her husband, who was in the Signal Corps, was stationed at a Southern cantonment and his outfit was on the verge of going overseas when the armistice was declared. He is employed as clerk by the Fisk Rubber Company. He and his bride's parents and friends seemed confident that Olga would qualify among the winners. Her artist friends and photographers in Springfield expected her to capture first prize. If pretty face alone counted, she might have.

SORRY FOR OTHER GIRLS.

When told that she had won third prize, Mrs. Atkins said:

"I feel sorry for the girls who didn't get anything. Among the eleven called before the judges were some whom I thought simply adorable. Of course, each felt eager and curious and doubtful. All these feelings were jumbled into one. I sent two photographs to the Boston American's Loveliest Girl Editor, a front view and a profile, and, strange as it may sound, I was so busy that I almost forgot I was in the contest, until one day a reporter called at our home.

"I was out hair-dressing and was surprised when I met mother down town to do shopping for Christmas, to be introduced to a representative of the Boston American. When he told me that my picture came in a very select group I was further surprised, but he was careful to explain that there were many other photographs in that group, from which there could be only four selected as winners.

"He told me not to build any false hopes. He then asked for details about my height, weight, education, etc., and whether my health was good. After some days I received an invitation to go to Boston to meet the judges with ten other candidates. We were each viewed and interviewed by the five judges in Artist Major's studio, No. 30 Ipswich street.

"JOLLIEST ADVENTURE."

"Some of the girls came with relatives. We were made to feel very much at home and everything possible was done to conceal the feeling that we were on exhibition. It was not a bit uncomfortable. On the contrary, we all seemed to look upon it as the jolliest and oddest kind of an adventure. I thank the judges and the management of the Boston American very much for awarding me $500. I shall use the money to good advantage.

"I was delighted when I heard the girl from Northern Maine had got a prize. She had come so far and was so pretty. Everybody liked her. Do you know the thing that gives me the most pleasure? It is the thought that I can now help make my husband a Shriner. It will help us both. The Loveliest Girl Contest was loads of fun."

(The winner of fourth prize and the names and adventures of the girls who received honorary mention will be published in the Boston American tomorrow.)

ALLEGED BANDIT IS HELD

Somerville Woman Accuses Him of Demanding Cash With Revolver

Peter Fallate, twenty-four years old, of Alpine street, Somerville, was arraigned in the Somerville Court today on two charges, attack with intent to rob Mrs. Ida Biller, of No. 352 Lowell street, Somerville, and carrying a loaded revolver.

He pleaded not guilty to both charges and was held in $2,000 on the first and $500 on the latter for a hearing on January 12.

According to Mrs. Biller, who conducts a store in her home, Fallate entered the store on Monday night and asked for cigars and eggs. While she was getting the eggs, she claims that he held her up and demanded the cash. Her screams drove him away, she said.

He came back again last night and her husband with the help of a passerby held him until the arrival of the police.

HORGAN WILL AID BACKUS

Palmer's Appointee as "Dry" Prosecutor Assumes Duties in Callagher's Office

Herbert A. Horgan of Brookline today took up his new duties at the Federal building as special assistant to Attorney-General Palmer for the specific purpose of prosecuting liquor cases in the Boston district.

He was greeted by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Backus, who informed a Boston American representative that "Mr. Horgan has been assigned by the authorities to work with me."

"I have nothing to say other than what has been published co[illegible] my appointment," Horgan [illegible] when interviewed. "You see, [illegible] here to take up my duties to w[illegible] have been assigned. I have been appointed. That's all I know and I am carrying out the duties assigned me. Further than that I don't wish to say anything."

District Attorney Daniel J. Gallagher, who was considered to have been slighted by the authorities through the appointment, was not present and could not be located at his office, No. 85 Devonshire street, or his private law office in the Kimball Building.

Mr. Horgan arrived at the Federal Building shortly after 10 o'clock and went directly to the office of Attorney Backus. The two men shook hands, and Horgan was then introduced to the office staff. After talking with the Boston American representative, both excused themselves and retired to a private room for a conference.

Attorney Backus, in addition to the statement that Mr. Horgan was to work with him, merely added: "He is here. He's a pretty good fellow."

BUILDING TRADES TIEUP IN BOSTON IS UNBROKEN

The deadlock in the building trades in this city was unbroken following a protracted conference between committees representing the Building Trades Employers' Association and the United Building Trades Council at the Boston City Club.

Stage Gibes at Clergy Arouse Protestants

Washington, Jan. 5.—Declaring that on the stage, in motion pictures and in cartoons "the Protestant minister is seldom represented except as an effeminate fool," the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church announced that it is going to "exert every effort to stop this contemptuous treatment."

"Members of the Roman Catholic Church do not tolerate such treatment of their priesthood, which is always represented in a most favorable way," according to the statement. "The Catholics are to be commended. And the time has come when Protestants should not tolerate any other than courteous treatment of their religion and ministry. All that the Protestant Churches want is the courtesy accorded to the Roman Catholic Church, and they are going to get it if possible."

The board plans to ask Protestant ministers throughout the country to bring the matter before their congregations, with a view to reporting "any violations of ordinary courtesy" to the board, which will then give these incidents publicity.

"It is believed that this objectionable development has crept upon the newspapers inadvertently," the statement concludes, "and that they and the motion picture interests at least will be glad to check it sharply."

PHONE GIRLS TO GET MEDALS

Big Cash Awards Also to Gladden Those Performing Conspicuous Services

Details of the plan whereby employes of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company and the Providence Telephone Company, numbering about 18,000 in all, may compete for the medals and cash gifts to be awarded for conspicuous and meritorious service are being worked out today by a general committee appointed by President Matt B. Jones of the New England company.

The Bell telephone system has established a fund known as the "Theodore N. Vail Memorial Fund," the income from which will provide a "special distinguished service medal" of gold accompanied by a cash award of $1,000, eight silver medals accompanied by cash awards of $250, and two gold medals carrying a cash gift of $500 each.

There will also be a number of bronze medals.

Each medal will be accompanied by a citation of the circumstances which occasioned the award, and any exceptional act of bravery or service of employe will not go unnoticed by the committee.

SECRETLY WED 16 MONTHS

Simmons College Girl Reveals Marriage to Join Husband in Brown University

For sixteen months Herbert Mills and Gladys Burnett of Lynn kept their high school graduation marriage secret. Then the lonesome bride had to reveal the marriage to her mother when she announced her desire to transfer from Simmons College to Pembroke, the co-educational college of Brown University. For young Mills is taking a special course at Brown University and Pembroke furnished the long-delayed opportunity to be together through their college life.

Mills was graduated from the Lynn Classical High School in June, 1919. Miss Burnett was graduated from the Lynn English High School at the same time. When both went to adjoining camps at Georgetown for their vacation they had long been sweethearts. They were married by the Rev. Charles B. Atwood of Georgetown on August 21, 1919, but decided to keep their marriage a secret until both had finished college courses.

On February 1, Mr. and Mrs. James Burnett, parents of the bride, will give a reception to the couple at her home, No. 24B Rockaway street. Mills is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alwyn Mills of No. 330 Chatham street.

Admiral's 7 Waifs in Detention Pen

New York, Jan. 5.—Rear Admiral N. A. McCully, former United States High Commissioner at Sebastopol, left for Washington today to fight the ruling of the immigration authorities at Ellis Island barring from this country the seven Russian children he brought here for legal adoption.

Before departing for the capital, Admiral McCully declared he is prepared to meet the contention of the inquiry board that the children are likely to become public charges, by the assertion that he is prepared to adopt the youngsters, and is ready to file as many and as high bonds as may be required.

In the meantime the seven youngsters are being detained at Ellis Island, pending the decision of the Washington authorities.

The admiral says that all of the children are "blue bloods," and that he looked up their ancestry before taking them.

He brought them with him from Sebastopol on board the naval collier Ramapo. During the trip he played Santa Claus to the brood, having taken the precaution to have a Christmas tree placed on board the vessel before she sailed.

He intended to take them to his home in Washington, kept by his niece, as he is a bachelor.

"There are three more coming, making ten in all, and I expect that they will keep me busy during my shore leaves," laughed the admiral.

In the present party are five boys and two girls. One of them Eugenia Selifanova, nineteen years old, has been trained as a nurse.

INTEREST GROWS IN $5,000 MOVIE TEST

TWO MORE PHOTOS TODAY

See if You Can Recognize Faces of Players on the [illegible] Picture Page

[illegible] 5,000 Movie Player Identification, promoted by the Boston [illegible] in association with the [illegible] Sunday Advertiser, enters to-[illegible] upon its second quarter.

Test Pictures Nos. 31 and 32 are shown upon the Picture Page. The gentleman is one of America's most gifted players, is descended from two families eminent in our theatre from the beginning and has been equally successful on the stage and in the films. The lady will be recognized at once by all who know either shadowland or spoken drama.

Get into this Test today. It isn't as easy as rolling off a log, and on the other hand it is not impossible. For a period of 60 days—this is the Sixteenth Day—there will be printed every day two pictures of players well known in Movie Land.

HOW TO ENTER TEST.

You may enter the Test without notice to this office. All you have to do is cut out and identify the Test pictures. They are shown on week days in the Boston American and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. SEND IN NOTHING UNTIL THE END OF THE TEST! When the Test Pictures of the Sixtieth Day appear and you identify them, you will send in your entire lot of slips and the following awards will be made by the co-operating newspapers to those with the largest numbers of CORRECT identifications:

ONE FIRST AWARD	$1,000
ONE SECOND AWARD	750
ONE THIRD AWARD	500
ONE FOURTH AWARD	400
ONE FIFTH AWARD	300
ONE SIXTH AWARD	200
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	150
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	100
ONE NINTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH	550
TOTAL	$5,000

If you are reading about the Test for the first time, we would suggest that you now turn to the Rules. If they do not tell you all you need to know about the Test the Movie Test Editor is at your service. He may be addressed at No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

The Plan is simplicity itself. If you know the pictures, name them. If you can name enough of them—CORRECTLY—there is no reason why you should not earn the First Award, $1,000. All the awards, by the way, will be paid IN CASH.

NOT WASTE OF TIME.

Somebody may have charged you with "wasting your time in the movies." This is your opportunity to turn the time spent in motion picture theatres into cash. For our part, we never visit the movies without learning something. We should like no better fun than going after one of these 219 awards. Employes of the co-operating newspapers, as well as all associated publications, are barred from taking part. (Likewise the members of their families.)

YOUR REGULAR NEWSDEALER WILL EXPLAIN HOW YOU CAN START IN THIS TEST TO-DAY ON EVEN TERMS WITH THOSE WHO CAME IN AT THE BEGINNING. There is a way. The news agent can point it out to you. We want the Test to be wide open to everybody in New England and Canada.

By this time every participant in the Test must realize the value of our suggestion about placing an order for the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser for at least the duration of the Test.

If you "take your chances," of getting one of the co-operating newspapers every day, you may be bitterly disappointed at a crucial time in the Test. Demand for the two newspapers is increasing with each edition and it is not impossible that on the twenty-eighth, thirty-fifth or fortieth day of the Test—for example—you will "take a chance" and find every dealer in your district "all sold out."

TELL YOUR ACQUAINTANCES.

Tell your acquaintances about the Test. You may have a friend who "knows the movies and the people of the movies from A to Z." Show him the way to earn $1,000 without a great deal of effort.

The best way to keep posted on the players is to go frequently to the motion picture theatres. A list which includes most of the first-class houses in New England is printed on this page. Then there is a number of high class, beautifully illustrated magazines devoted to the moving pictures. Study these.

Evidence is before us that thousands upon thousands of you are enjoying this fascinating "game" and that thousands more are joining you every day.

The more, the merrier! Come one, come all! But, there will be only 219 awards. DO be careful. Make SURE of your identifications. It is SO easy to make a mistake!

Tomorrow, Test Pictures No. 33 and 34.

CALLS MEETING TO AID IDLE OF HAVERHILL

Haverhill, Jan. 5.—With 10,000 shoe workers loafing for the past seven months and reports of suffering increasing, Alderman Horace M. Sargent, just elected head of the department of health and charities, has sent out notices to the churches, lodges, charitable, social, labor and other organizations to send one or more representatives to a meeting at City Hall, Wednesday, January 12, for the purpose of discussing methods to aid the unemployed and render assistance to those in need.

Theatres Co-operating in Test

Proprietors and managers of nearly four hundred popular motion picture theatres throughout New England are making the $5,000 Movie Player Identification Test as easy as possible for their patrons by flashing upon the screen at every performance the Test pictures exactly as they appear in the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Pictures are shown in newspaper and theatres on the same day.

Among the co-operating theatres are some of the very best in this part of the country. They include the most up-to-date houses in their respective localities. Study the list. Select your theatre for the duration of the Test. Every theatre on this list is worthy of public confidence and support:

$5,000 MOVIE TEST RULES

Read Carefully These Regulations Governing Players' Identity Awards

The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser's new Moving Picture Players' Identification Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given by these two newspapers to their readers who submit the largest percentage of correct identifications to the 120 pictures to be published in these two newspapers.

All employes of the Boston American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser, and their families, and all moving picture players and persons connected with the moving picture industry are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The Test will consist of 120 pictures of favorite moving picture players, to be printed, two each day, in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, first picture Sunday, December 19, 1920.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which shall be run by the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering this Test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE identification to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award, and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every identification must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser or on a page of some book form by itself, accompanied either by the picture furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each identification blank.

Do not send your identification in "list" form, i. e., do not write identifications under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct identifications, awards will be given to the persons submitting the largest percentage of correct identifications.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy in spelling, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their identifications before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your identifications from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first identifications sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All identifications must be delivered to the Boston American Movie Test Headquarters, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit, which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing identifications must be legibly addressed as follows: "Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., P. O. Box 239," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

As all identifications will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first class matter. The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to refuse to consider any sets of identifications on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered, as far as possible, through the columns of the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such reply, or they may phone Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the test, and the decision of the Boston American Movie Test Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions now made or to be made.

CUBA REVIVING, SAYS TABOADA

Consul-General Predicts Return to Normal Business Within Two Months

New York, Jan. 5. — Two months will see a complete return to normal in the financial and political conditions in Cuba, Felipe Taboada, Cuban Consul General here, told Universal Service today.

The improvement in financial conditions in the island republic has been so marked, Senor Taboada said, that although the moratorium was extended until the end of January, it was so modified as to allow full payment by banks which find themselves able to meet their obligations. This plan has resulted in resumption of full payment by all Cuban banks except the Banco Nationale, the Banco Espanol and the Banco Mercantile.

ELECTION DECISION SOON.

The controversy over the contested election of November 1 last is now in the courts and a final decision will be rendered before the end of January, Senor Taboada said. In this election Dr. Alfredo Zayas, candidate of the National League, a coalition of the Conservatives and a faction of Liberals, opposed General Jose M. Gomez, candidate of the Liberal party.

On the face of the returns, Dr. Zayas appeared to have won the election by a comfortable majority, but the Liberal party brought court action, asking that the votes of a large number of polling places be thrown out because of alleged irregularities.

There is ample time for settlement of this dispute before the date for the inauguration of the new President, May 20, Senor Taboada pointed out.

CONDITIONS EXAGGERATED.

"The situation in Cuba has been greatly exaggerated in reports reaching this country," Senator Taboada said. "Naturally such an event as the collapse of the sugar market would bring about a severe financial crisis in a country whose prosperity is based so largely on one product.

"The banks had made vast loans to sugar planters and refiners on a basis of the market value of sugar. When the security for these loans suffered a shrinkage in value of approximately 75 per cent. in the course of a few weeks many of the banks became technically insolvent.

"In a situation like that the moratorium was the only solution. The banks were allowed time to readjust their affairs to new conditions. This period of readjustment is now nearing its end and a complete restoration of normal conditions will not be long delayed."

U. S. DOES NOT DESIRE TO INTERVENE IN CUBA

Washington, Jan. 5.—The United States has no desire to interfere in Cuba, Acting Secretary of State Davis informed Cuban Minister Cestedes here.

Minister Cestesdes called at the State Department to gain information concerning the dispatching of General Crowder to Cuba by the President. He was informed that General Crowder had been ordered to Cuba in an attempt to reach a settlement with the Cuban government which would make intervention unnecessary.

Made of good Coutil, well boned with Sta-bone; 5 clasps and hook, wide hose supporters, embroidery trimmed too. We're going to sell 'em at bout half what he paid and make a profit, and you can buy 'em and make a big savin'—cause they're good corsets—all brand new—good model—well made—and even tho you get 'em so cheap, YOU CAN BRING 'EM BACK AND GET A NEW PAIR or YOUR MONEY, IF THEY DON'T GIVE YOU MOST SATISFACTORY WEAR. Could we be any fairer?

Alkali In Soap Bad For the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonsful of mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

LEGISLATURE IS CONVENED

Unemployment and Other Perplexing Problems Face 142nd Annual Session

Confronted with unemployment and other serious problems, the Massachusetts Legislature today convened for its 142d annual session.

Senator Frank G. Allen of Norwood was elected president of the Senate and Representative Benjamin Loring Young of Weston Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Senator Allen had the distinction of being elected president of the Senate in his second year in that body. He served in the House in 1918 and 1919. He succeeds President Edwin T. McKnight, who retired from public life. He is aged fifty-six.

YOUNG, HOUSE SPEAKER.

Representative Benjamin Loring Young of Weston, who succeeded Joseph E. Warner of Taunton as Speaker of the lower branch, has served in the House since 1916 and was the Republican floor leader during the past year. He is aged thirty-five.

Senator Silas D. Reed of Taunton, the oldest member in the point of service, called the upper branch to order and acts as presiding officer until the formal election of President Allen.

Representative John M. Woods of Somerville, at the ripe old age of eighty-one, presided over the House until the election of Speaker Young. Representative Woods is the oldest member in age as well as in service. He served in the House in 1884.

Previous to the formal opening of the two branches a caucus was held by the members of both parties at which the Republican and Democratic floor leaders for the Senate and House were chosen.

OVERWHELMINGLY G. O. P.

The House and Senate this year are overwhelmingly Republican. There are 188 Republicans to fifty Democrats in the House and thirty-five Republicans to five Democrats in the Senate. There are two independents in the House.

Martin M. Lomasney of Boston can succeed William H. McDonnell, also of Boston, who goes to the Senate, as the Democratic floor leader in the House if he desires, but whether he desires to be floor leader in the House or not, the "Mahatma" will be the Democratic leader just the same. This is Representative Lomasney's fourteenth year in the House.

Representative Victor Francis Jewett of Lowell will be appointed the Republican "whip" in the House.

Although it is doubtful as to who will be the Republican floor leader in the Senate, it was predicted that Senator Alvin E. Bliss of Malden will be named. This will be a setback to Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River, who was the Republican "whip" under former President McKnight, and who still wants the job.

HOLT, SERGEANT-AT-ARMS.

Henry D. Coolidge of Concord will be elected clerk of the Senate for his thirty-second year, William H. Sanger, assistant clerk, and the Rev. Edward A. Horton, chaplain. This is the Rev. Mr. Horton's seventeenth year in that capacity.

James W. Kimball of Swampscott will be elected clerk of the House, this being the twenty-fifth year he has held that position. Frank E. Bridgeman will be elected assistant and the Rev. William F. Dusseault of Boston as chaplain for his third year.

Charles O. Holt will be elected sergeant-at-arms to succeed James F. Beatty who was chosen last year following the sudden death of Thomas F. Pedrick who was sergeant-at-arms from 1884 until the time of his death. Beatty retires voluntarily. Holt has been a Senate messenger for years.

TWO BODIES FOUND AFTER EXPLOSION OF DYNAMITE

Williamson, W. Va., Jan. 5.—Dismembered parts of the bodies of two men were found at Gates, ten miles east of Williamson, after a dynamite explosion during the night had alarmed the inhabitants of that community. The identity of the men and the cause of the explosion have not been ascertained, according to reports made to Colonel Herman Hall, in command of the battalion of United States troops on duty in Mingo County strike area and to Sheriff A. C. Pinson.

The only theory yet advanced is that the victims were striking miners and had the explosive to blow up the boarding house occupied by a number of non-union miners.

BROCKTON CITY HALL STORMED BY IDLE MEN

Brockton, Jan. 5.—Addressing a crowd of unemployed who had gathered in the corridor of City Hall here, Mayor Roger Keith promised them that everything possible will be done to obtain work for them. If the mild weather continues it is probable that a $30,000 drainage project will be started, which would give employment to many now idle and a special meeting of the city council may be called to vote additional appropriations for the purchase of more standing wood. The Mayor stated that every city department will be called upon to aid in solving the serious unemployment problem.

PALMER NAMES AGENTS IN BUILDING PROBE

Washington, Jan. 5.—Attorney-General Palmer has assigned William Rand and Isidor J. $150,000 FIRE IN NORWALK

Three Persons Are Carried From Upper Story by Policeman

South Norwalk, Ct., Jan. 5.—A loss estimated at $150,000 resulted from a fire which partly destroyed the Swarts & Corbett block, Washington street, occupied by a shoe store and trust company on the first floor, a cigar factory on the second floor and lace factory on the third.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Murray and their daughter, living on the top floor, were rescued by a policeman, who made three trips to the upper story to carry them through smoke filled halls.

HOUSTON PLANS EXPORT LOANS

90 Days May Elapse Before Credit Machinery Can Be Set Up

Washington, Jan. 5.—Secretary of the Treasury Houston called his advisers into conference today to determine methods of reviving the export loan operations of the War Finance Corporation. Possibly ninety days may elapse before credit machinery can be set up.

When Congress passed the measure over the President's veto officials said flotation of a large issue of corporation bonds to provide credit for shipments of farm products probably will be decided upon.

An unexpected delay also may appear through the necessity of adding two members to the corporation. When the loan operations were suspended two vacancies were created. The corporation now has three directors. Revival of the loan work necessitates the filling of the two vacancies to provide a quorum.

Secretary Houston devoted considerable time today to a study of the provisions of the bill and of the methods that best can be followed to carry out the will of Congress.

First there was a review of the corporation's affairs, showing its current assets to be about $375,000,000.

This represents cash due from the United States treasury and includes the sale of government obligations to the Secretary of the Treasury. But this book balance could not be used on finance export shipment, it was said, unless the treasury decided upon such a step through sale of a corresponding amount of treasury certificates of indebtedness. There is also listed among the corporation's assets outstanding loans amounting to $119,231,065.

Export loans remaining due to the corporation amount to $43,493,507. Other loans are public utilities, $21,132,995; railroads, $53,828,210; industrial corporations, $973,594, and cattle loans, $803,757.

GAS EXPLOSION RIPS MELROSE LIGHT POLE

An accumulation of gas from the pipes following along a conduit in the street is believed to have been the cause of an explosion in an iron box on an electric light pole in front of the home of Arthur Hislop, No. 958 Main street, Melrose Highlands. The five-pound iron door, more than a foot square, was hurled with violence against the piazza of the Hislop house while the upper part of the pole was torn into chips.

"Candy Lower; Skirts Higher," Says Sign

This sign was found near the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital on Huntington avenue in a store window:

"Candy is lower."

Someone came along and wrote underneath:

"But skirts are higher."

The proprietor of the store would not erase the lower line, saying it was too true to be trifled with.

JAPAN DISCLAIMS AIM AT U. S.

Baron Hayashi Says Treaty With Britain Does Not Affect America

London, Jan. 5.—A double barrelled reply to Senator Reed's statement in the New York American, is printed in the London Times. The first part of the reply is a statement by Baron Hayashi, Japanese ambassador, who says:

"The basic idea of the Anglo-Japanese alliance is to protect by common action the territorial rights and common interests of Japan and Great Britain in Eastern Asia and India. The United States was never thought of by the contracting parties as a country which would ever take or contemplate taking any action likely to threaten their territorial rights in the Far East.

NO IDEA OF U. S. WAR.

"It was therefore never in the mind of the Japanese government to fight the United States at all, and moreover, in the most improbable eventuality of such a war, Japan would not expect England to come to her assistance.

"Hence the Japanese and British governments have agreed to insert Article IV., which would absolve Great Britain from any obligation to join Japan in a war against America. Only a general phraseology was selected for reasons of diplomatic nicety, but what the negotiators had in mind is obvious.

"I must further state in refutation of irresponsible and sensational utterances in the American press and elsewhere, that there exists no secret agreement between Japan and Great Britain. I am sincerely sorry that there are such mischief-makers whose efforts are not only injurious to Japan and England, but to the United States as well.

NO SECRET CLAUSE.

"Under these circumstances I can assure you with all the emphasis at my command that the alliance will never stand in the way of a good understanding and friendly relations between Great Gritain and the United States, nor is it in the least the intention of Japan to use the alliance as a means of direct pressure in any degree upon her old friend the United States.

"The suggestion of Senator Reed that the alliance contains a secret clause directed against the United States is without foundation. He asks why, if the treaty contained nothing sinister in import, its terms could not be published? Had he made inquiry he would have found that the full text of the agreement of 1902, 1905 and 1921 had been published. The present form of the alliance is unchanged in purpose and substance."

NORTHCLIFFE REPLIES.

Lord Northcliffe replies to the Reed article editorially in the Times, along the same lines as Baron Hayashi. Lord Northcliffe adds in his editorial:

"American anglophobes will profess to disbelieve Baron Hayashi as they professed to disbelieve Lord Northcliffe. Honest men among them are suffering from a bad attack of 'preternatural suspicion,' as Carlyle calls it, which haunted millions of Frenchmen at the time of the revolution.

"But we believe that the great bulk of American people are open to conviction even upon subjects upon which they are more or less prejudiced. The testimony of the Japanese ambassador will have due weight with them. A candid official declaration from the British government to a like effect would satisfy them altogether."

DR. CONRAD 15 YEARS AT PARK ST. CHURCH

Nearly 1,500 people filled the chapel and vestry of the Park Street Congregational Church to congratulate the Rev. A. Z. Conrad on the occasion marking the fifteenth anniversary of his pastorate there.

Alfred H. Colby, a former deacon of the church, presented the minister with a huge bouquet of roses on behalf of the congregation, and Dr. Conrad fittingly responded. The Union Orchestral Club, together with vocal selections by the church quartet, including John Hermann Loud, F. A. G. O., church organist, provided the musical part of the program.

FULL TIME FOR 18,000 HANDS

Amoskeag Cotton Mills on New Schedule; Business Booms in Many Lines

Business is improving. From widely separated points come reports of increased production and resumption of activity.

The entire cotton department of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company's huge plant at Manchester, N. H., employing more than 18,000 hands, went on full time today, according to a statement issued by W. Parker Straw, agent for the corporation.

Mr. Straw added that the outlook was so promising the worsted department, closed for several months, would be run on half time with the prospect it would go on full time shortly.

Detroit reports that the big automobile plants there are showing increased activity and today started 1,000 additional men at work.

Among others that have sent for more men are the Hudson Motor Company, the Continental Motors and the Scripps-Booth Motor Company.

F. J. Fisher of the Fisher Body Company of Detroit announced that his concern intends adding 2,000 names to the payroll before February 1.

All the Studebaker automobile plants in the Michigan city will begin operations Monday.

Reports that Ford plants are to reopen at once were denied by officials in Detroit.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 men will be re-employed in and around Milwaukee this week, say reports from that city. The International Harvester Company announced that between 250 and 500 additional workers would be engaged within ten days, if business conditions continued to improve.

The Federal Rubber Company at Milwaukee and the Nash Motors Company both will open again within ten days.

The H. B. Smith Company foundry, the largest employer of help in Westfield, has posted notice that a five-day week working schedule will be in operation for the present. The concern employs about 1,200 hands and slack times have caused layoffs during the last few weeks.

Labor conditions are reflected in the monthly report of the Boston Public Employment Office in Kneeland street. Demands for labor during December were few. Requests for jobs were many. Orders from employers fell off 60 per cent. from the figures of December, 1919, and 24 per cent. from the figures of November, 1920. During the month 2,621 ex-service men sought work through the office. Only forty were placed. The report states that there is a particularly large number of stenographers out of work.

Honesty and Sense Make Hub Conservative, Says Banker

Rev. Dr. Paul Revere Frothingham says Boston is the "most conservative city in the most conservative section of the United States." He believes "Boston's besetting sin is conservatism, which is a mental luxury" the city can ill afford.

Other prominent Bostonians have other ideas. Some of them defend this same conservatism. Still others side with the clergyman and urge Boston to awake, seize her opportunities, make the most of them and develop her gifts to their fullest extent.

Here is what George S. Mumford, president of the Commonwealth Trust Company, has to say on the subject.

By GEORGE S. MUMFORD,
President Commonwealth Trust Company.

Is Boston too conservative? Is Boston merely the bedroom for New York? Is Boston too cold and inhospitable? Perhaps some people think so, but there are a whole lot of others who come here from other parts of the country who don't think anything of the kind.

There are many families here who have possessed property for generations, who have inherited the habit of retaining and conserving the principal and drawing a hard and fast line between that and what they consider their income.

There are such families in New York and in all the Eastern part of the United States, and they exist also in the Western cities, only there this habit has been transmitted through fewer generations.

The difference between Boston and all these other centres is that in proportion to the population she seems to have a greater number of them.

This habit may be conservative, but it seems like common sense. It does not mean that the capital is not invested all over the continent in copper mines, Western railroads, Western real estate, Chicago skyscrapers, Mexican silver mines and California orange groves, for Boston capital is to be found everywhere. It does mean that Bostonians have as a whole learned to live on their incomes to a greater extent than New Yorkers, for instance. Perhaps this is partly because New York is an easier place in which to spend money.

Certainly it seems as if much of the money spent in New York by New Yorkers is made and spent as fast as it comes into their hands. For a man to make a million dollars there is apparently not worth while unless he can advertise the fact to the world by building a huge house, hiring a great suite of rooms in a hotel and buying half a dozen motor cars so that the world may know he is rich. When the turn comes he and not the Boston man is the one who cannot pay his bills and defaults on his subscription agreements. It is called enterprise and it certainly is not conservatism.

Boston men are known all over the country as men who keep their agreements, whose subscriptions are as good or better than they promised, and their standards of business honesty are the highest in the whole country.

Either consciously or unconsciously we are proud of traditions that place us in such a position, and this same pride sometimes, no doubt, causes us to hesitate to take steps in many directions that we ought to take.

It is this kind of conservatism that prevents our having, like other great cities, a Greater Boston of nearly two million inhabitants by uniting with our suburbs, that delays the development of a proper street system and railroad communications between the two great terminal stations, and many other things.

These things, however, concern ourselves only and do not affect the rest of the country, and our share in the development of the country at large has been and still is of immense importance, but we like to contribute it in our own way and in accordance with our own ideas.

Wellesley Rats Hide Even the Traps

Oh, Rats!

Culture is so widely spread in Wellesley that even the rats are learned.

At least they are too well educated to be caught by the ordinary tricks. If the people of that college town are to be credited, the rodents would merely grin a super-cultured smile at the antics of any such illiterate as the Pied Piper.

Numbers of Wellesley residents have been trying to trap the rats in the vicinity of Brook street, only to found in the morning carefully hidden are samrter than they thought.

Traps set out at night have been found in the morning carefully hiden from sight by neat little mounds of earth, and in some cases have been buried so effectively that even those who set them out could not find them again.

Prof. Roux Alleges Cancer Is Infectious

London, Jan. 4.—Alleged proof that cancer is infectious was produced before the Academy of Sciences by Professor Roux of the Pasteur Institute, who declared that the conclusions of the Rockefeller Institute that the disease is incommunicable are founded on misapprehension.

Experimenting with fowls, Professor Roux, collaborating with Professor Paine of London, discovered that cancer is caused by an invisible virus, which defies all filtration and is susceptible of spreading by infecting neighboring tissues and muscles. These cancerations ultimately led to death, he declared.

CONGRESSMEN IN LIQUOR PLOT

Under Investigation in Alleged Scheme to Flood Chicago with $200,000 in Whiskey

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Federal officials of New York, New Jersey and Illinois are believed to be involved in a huge whiskey plot revealed here by the arrest of fifteen men by the local government authorities.

According to Prohibition Chief Frank Richardson, two local politicians, one a Congressman and the other a Congressman-elect, are under investigation for their part in the conspiracy to flood Chicago with $200,000 worth of whiskey brought from New York under stolen and forged permits.

The first hint of the conspiracy came with the arrest in New York last week of several women employes in the office of the prohibition enforcement agent there. The arrest of three Gotham business men followed immediately, and then on Friday afternoon Chief Richardson took an actor, Jack Costello, into custody.

The arrest of James Shea, a private detective, followed. In Shea's coat were found a number of blanks and a rubber stamp bearing the official signature for validating the permits for the removal of the whiskey from New York to Chicago.

"This is one of the biggest plots the department has run to earth," declared Chief Richardson today. "We expect and hope to make a number of additional arrests soon."

Three of the men arrested were held in $2,500 bail by United States Commissioner Mason.

GOMPERS ATTACKS BOYCOTT DECISION

St. Louis, Jan. 5.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor bitterly attacked the decision of the Supreme Court as to the "secondary boycott" in a statement issued here. He declared the court had "joined hands with promoters of the anti-shop movement." The decision held that "unions or their members are accountable under the anti-trust laws when they depart from their normal and legitimate objects and engage in an actual combination in restraint of trade." Mr. Gompers characterized the finding as a blow at human freedom.

JUDGE IS COMPLAINANT, ALSO SETTLES CASE

Gardner, Jan. 5.—The paradoxical, not to say contortionist, feat of a man sitting on himself was presented in the District Court here by Judge George R. Warfield. The judge was the complainant in a larceny case against Louise Morrison of Rutland, Vt., and after hearing the evidence he fined the young woman $20 and costs. It was alleged that while employed in the home of Judge Warfield she stole a traveling bag and other articles valued at $14.

F. I. F. SPEAKERS TO SPURN TERMS

Cohalan and Ryan Expected to Demand Full Freedom at Sunday Mass Meeting

The State Council and Boston Council, Friends of Irish Freedom, are completing plans for the mass meeting to be held next Sunday evening, January 9, at the Tremont Theatre, when Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of New York and Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia will be the principal speakers. All the branches of Greater Boston are arranging to have large delegations present.

The addresses to be delivered by Justice Cohalan and by Mr. Ryan, who is former city solicitor of the city of Philadelphia, are particularly timely, because of the proposed negotiations for a compromise of the demand for absolute independence for Ireland, which are daily referred to in cable dispatches from London and Dublin.

RYAN IS STERN FIGHTER.

Mr. Ryan for more than a decade of years, was the spokesman in America for those who followed the leadership of the late John Redmond. When the present movement for absodlute independence began, Mr. Ryan as the American head of the Unitetd Irish League, brought his forces into the ranks of those who demanded absolute independence. He is one of the members of the American commission on Irish independence that went to Paris to ask that the cause of Ireland be given a hearing. Later Mr. Ryan was one of the principal speakers before the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, when Ireland's case was presented.

It is expected that both speakers will very largely direct their remarks towards asking that there be no wavering in the struggle for recognition of the Irish Republic. Both have time and again made clear they would not assent to any compromise plan that would give to Ireland less than absolute independence.

NO TICKETS NEEDED.

There will be no tickets of admission issued, except to a very limited number of invited guests and clergy. The arrangements are under the direction of the Boston Council, of which Matthew Cummings is chairman. The memberes of the State Council, of which Daniel J. Moran is president, are acting in conjunction with the Boston Council.

A resolution calling on Congress to demand redress from England for insulting the American flag by placing a machine gun and armed soldiers aboard the steamer Pontia, of American registry, in Dublin Harbor, will be introduced at the mass meetings to be held in the Tremont Theatre and also on Boston Common.

Word was received by the Boston Council today that the National Council has forwarded $25,000 to the sufferers in Ireland.

FATHER FOUND TWO-YEAR-OLD BOY VERY SICK

Was Thin, No Appetite, Had Swollen Lips, Stomach Pains, Itching Nose

A hardy woodsman and enthusiastic fisherman, Joseph K. Lane, of Lincoln, Maine, has a very interesting record to report. He writes: "As a boy, thirty-seven years ago, I began to take Dr. True's Elixir. Once after six months hauling logs, I came out of the woods and found my two-year-old boy very sick. He was thin, had no appetite, had swollen lips, pains in stomach, an itching nose, was suffering from constipation, for months.

"I had not been in the house an hour when an elderly lady—a good neighbor—came in and told my wife to get a bottle of Dr. True's Elixir, saying she had seen numbers of similar cases which it had relieved.

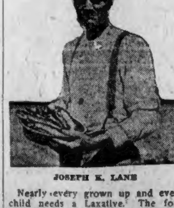
"My boy was given a half dozen doses of Elixir when he passed a lot of little worms, and right away began to show improvement; he began soon to eat with a relish, play around and look healthy. He did not have to take a full bottle, and in later years, whenever he got off his feed, a few doses would straighten him out quick.

"When I get constipated, a couple of teaspoons of Dr. True's Elixir fix me O. K.

"My son is grown up now and has a family of six children, and he has practically raised his family on Dr. True's Elixir. The children go out and get hold of something not good for them. It's hard to watch all the children, and so when they eat something they shouldn't and get sick, the Elixir is given and the family is put in good shape again.

"I have read in the papers you have to take a half dozen bottles of some remedies, but you don't have to do this with Dr. True's Elixir. Simply a few doses and then quick relief. The three generations of Lanes have been kept healthy by using it."

Symptoms of Worms: Offensive breath, swollen upper lip, deranged stomach, occasional pains about the navel, pale face, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose and rectum, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, red points on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever, constipation.



JOSEPH K. LANE

Nearly every grown up and every child needs a Laxative. The fond parents safeguard the health of their children by keeping their bowels in condition. In Dr. True's Elixir only pure herbs are used. No harmful drugs. Keep the bowels regular by using Dr. True's Elixir. At all dealers. 3 sizes. Buy the larger size.—Adv.

COLLINS' HUNT ON BLOOD TRAIL

Searchers Trace Stains Into Woods; Reported Near Plainville Road Bridge

New Bedford, Jan. 5.—Bloodstains near the Plainville road bridge that were reported seen by a woman on December 19, the day after the sixteen-year-old James F. Collins, Jr., of this city disappeared in the woods of that section, have developed a new lead for the police searchers to follow.

The stains were most distinct near the bridge, led up the bank of the brook to the sluice gate outlet of Turner's Pond and into the woods. The woods in the vicinity were being thoroughly searched today as a result of the report, which suggested the theory that the missing boy was struck by an automobile, the driver of which hid the body in the woods.

Another clew being followed up today is the unexplained appearance of a covered wagon, unusual in the woods, near Pitmley's saw mill on December 17. The wagon must have gone outside by way of the Plainville road bridge.

Still another lead was developed through the grilling of a woodsman witness who declared that one of the suspects in the case had been given a sentence in Montreal for a serious offence.

MAYOR OF CORK AWAITS ACTION

Department of Labor Refers Verdict on Stowaway to State Department

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The State Department will determine whether Daniel O'Callaghan, lord mayor of Cork, who arrived in Newport News as a stowaway, will be permitted to remain in the United States, the Immigration Bureau of the Department of Labor announced today.

The Department of Labor will take no action in the case until complete records have been received here, it was announced. Upon the arrival of the written records, charges will be drawn and the Department of Labor will then refer the entire matter to the State Department, inquiring whether the State Department is willing to waive the passport regulations in the case of O'Callaghan. If the State Department does not waive the regulations, O'Callaghan will then be deported.

Peter J. MacSwiney, brother of the late Lord Mayor of Cork, who arrived with O'Callaghan, does not come under the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor, as he held a passport vised by an American consul.

This passport had first been refused MacSwiney, and its issuance followed a heated protest made by Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts.

LEGION STARTS FIGHT ON NAVY YARD CUT

Steps to prevent a contemplated change in a department at the Charlestown navy yard, which, if carried through, would throw more than 1,000 men out of work, was instituted today by States officials of the American Legion.

The report that officials at Washington have decided to abandon the manufacture of iron chains and other parts for navy vessels which have been made at the navy yard for the past twenty years, has startled local navy officials, who predict the discharge of hundreds of men.

CHANGE OF ADMIRALS COMING AT NAVY YARD

Rear Admiral Herbert O. Dunn of the Boston Navy Yard will retire May 29, which will result in the promotion of Captain Henry A. Wiley to the rank of rear admiral.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

WILDCATS ELUDE GUNLESS POSSE

Beasts Safe, Says Bishop, Unless Firearm Permit Is Granted in Forest

Pittsfield, Jan. 5.—Unless the posse tracking the ferocious wildcats which have terrorized the town of Monterey and adjacent territory is permitted to use firearms in the Swann forest reservation, where they are forbidden, it will be useless to try and rout the beasts from their lairs.

This is the opinion expressed by Cortland Field Bishop and Count Crucien Luiggi, big game hunter of Alaska, who have been on the trail of the animals, together with about fifty Monterey men armed with tomahawks, bows, arrows and hatchets.

Mr. Bishop's German police dog Lupo and his Alaskan hunting dogs drove scores of wildcats to their caves in the upper reaches of Beartown Mountain, but the hunters were unable to kill any.

Sharpshooters armed with rifles stood just outside the reservation. They included Harry Mallory, Charles Kimberly, Charles Hanlon and Perry Fargo. Kimberly wounded one cat which got away in the dense thicket.

Miss Beatrice Bend Bishop, daughter of Cortland Bishop, also engaged in the chase.

Steel traps are at a premium in the Southern Berkshires and farmers are placing them in a circle every few feet around their hencoops.

Bears or Dogs Raid Flocks of Williamstown Owners

Williamstown, Jan. 5.—Sheep and goats in this town are being killed in large numbers by either a pack of savage dogs or bears from Greylock or Petersburg mountains. No one, however, has been able to solve the mystery.

The latest raid reported was on a flock of goats owned by Henry N. Teague, proprietor of the Greylock Hotel. Five goats were killed, two of them billy goats that could put to rout any dog in this section.

Mr. Teague and Charles H. Davidson have filed claims for damages totalling $355 with the county commissioners.

Bear tracks have been seen in the snow leading from the Teague farm to Petersburg Mountain and other tracks lead from the Davidson estate, in another part of the town, to Greylock.

The new board of county commissioners will meet tomorrow when war will be officially declared on all black bears and sheep killing dogs of Northern Berkshire.

DIAL WANTS HOLDUP OF SERVICE RECRUITING

Washington, Jan. 5.—As a remedy for high living costs, high taxes and large government expenditures, Senator Dial of South Carolina introduced in the Senate a resolution providing for a cessation of all recruiting for the army, navy or marine corps and prohibiting further extensions in these services.

Washington, Jan. 5.—A resolution prohibiting further enlistments in the United States army until the strength of the army is reduced to 175,000 was introduced in the Senate by Senator New of Indiana.

MAIL CARRIER STATUE IS REFUSED BY STATE

Concord, N. H., Jan. 5.—The State of New Hampshire has refused to accept a widow's bequest for a statue of her husband, Fred Sargent, a mail carrier, to be erected in the State House. The Governor and Council, following a consultation with the Attorney-General, voted to notify the executor of the will of Mrs. Lizzie Sargent that the State would not accept her bequest. Sargent for many years delivered mail through the Capitol building.

Women at Painters' Boston Convention

Photographed at convention: Miss J. McLearich (at left) and Miss J. McDonald of Dorchester (in centre) and Miss L. Preston of Boston.

Discussion of trade papers engrossed the attention of the delegates attending the second session today of the three-day gathering of the thirtieth annual convention of the Society of Master Painters and Decorators of Massachusetts in Horticultural Hall, Huntington and Massachusetts avenues. Many women were in attendance.

Henry B. Kelley of the Boston Committee on Trade Schools read a paper entitled "From What Source Shall We Obtain the Journeyman Painter of the Future?" and was followed by George O. Greener, director of the North Bennet Street Industrial School, whose theme was "What the School Has to Offer to the Trade."

Next came Lewis A. Maverick of Cambridge, secretary of the New England Vocational Guidance Association and the Bureau of Vocation Guidance of Harvard University, on the subject of "Helping the Child to Select His Life Work."

Dr. D. Louis Ireton, director of the Trade School Development Committee of the International Association, spoke on "Trade School Development in the United States and Canada."

"What Constitutes a Successful Master Painter," was discussed by Ivory H. Morse. H. W. Christensen concluded the argument with a talk on "Linseed Oil, Turpentine and Dryers."

President John J. Haley, who presided, announced the appointment of different committees.

The exhibits of different concerns in another part of the building attracted crowds from all parts of the city. Many handsome souvenirs were passed out. Luncheons were served by a committee of women. A social dance for the delegates will be held tonight.

The convention will end tomorrow with the election of officers and the selection of the next convention city.

FULLER RESIGNS FROM HOUSE

Lieut.-Governor-Elect Writes Coolidge He Regrets Inability to Serve Full Term

Alvan T. Fuller, Lieutenant-Governor-elect, in a letter to Governor Coolidge notifying him of his resignation as a member of the House, expresses regret that the provisions of the Constitution prevent him from serving out his two full years as a Congressman.

His letter to Governor Coolidge follows:

"It is with extreme regret that I have learned definitely during the past week that I must resign my seat in Congress before being inaugurated as Lieutenant-Governor. Apparently to hold both offices would be a violation of the provisions of the Constitution. Therefore, I beg to advise you that I have this day tendered my resignation to the Speaker of the National House of Representatives as Representative from the Ninth Congressional District of Massachusetts, such resignation to take effect on the fifth day of January, 1921.

"I had hoped to serve until March 4 and thus finish out my full two terms. It has been my privilege to represent my district in the halls of Congress during the great war which constituted, I believe, the four most eventful years in American history. I shall take up my new duties as Lieutenant-Governor with a heart full of gratitude to those who have honored me in the past, hopeful that I can merit their continued regard and esteem.

"With kindest personal regards and best wishes, please believe me,

"Cordially yours,

"ALVAN T. FULLER."

Thousands Are Nervous Wrecks
Cross, Crabbed and Care-worn
From Weak, Thin Watery Blood without ever suspecting the real cause of their trouble—Iron-starvation.

A New York Physician says that MORE THAN ONE-HALF THE POPULATION OF AMERICA PERISHES BEFORE MIDDLE AGE and that one of the chief contributary causes of this terrible waste of human life is the devitalizing weakness brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

THERE ARE 30,000,000,000,000 RED BLOOD CORPUSCLES IN YOUR BLOOD AND EACH ONE MUST HAVE IRON.

An enormous number of people who ought to be strong, vigorous and in the prime of life are constantly complaining of weak nerves, headaches, pains across the back, disturbed digestion, shortness of breath, a general "run-down" condition, melancholy, bad memory, etc., when the real cause of all their suffering is IRON STARVATION OF THE BLOOD.

The proof of this is shown by the fact that when organic iron is supplied to their blood, that all their multitude of symptoms often quickly disappear and the very men and women who were formerly so complaining now become strong, healthy and vigorous, with even dispositions and a sunny, cheerful nature.

Nature put plenty of iron in the husks of grains and the skin and peels of vegetables and fruits to enrich your blood, but modern methods of cookery throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase, in recent years, in anaemia—iron starvation of the blood, with all its attendant ills.

If you are not willing to go back to nature then you should eat more such iron-containing vegetables as spinach and carrots and reinforce them by taking a little organic iron from time to time. But be sure the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron and is therefore an entirely different thing from organic iron. Organic iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. It may be had from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It's like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood and revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. At all druggists.

STOKES MAY BE YALE HEAD

Present Secretary Seems Favorite as Successor to President Hadley

Who is to be the next president of Yale?

The weighty problem is puzzling many able minds, not the least of which are those of the university corporation, who will elect a successor to Dr. Arthur T. Hadley next Saturday.

Out of a multitude of names canvassed by a special committee, many of which have been submitted to the corporation, the choice seems to have narrowed down to three.

THREE IN RACE.

These are Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes, believed to be the most likely candidate; Dean Hawkes of Columbia, candidate of an element which insists that a non-secret society man be chosen, and Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, favored by New York members of the corporation.

It is believed that Secretary Stokes' candidacy is more generally supported by corporation members, alumni, faculty and undergraduates than any of the others.

He was born at New Brighton, Staten Island, New York, April 13, 1874, the son of Anson Phelps and Helen Louise (Phelps) Stokes, and is the brother of James Graham Phelps Stokes. He received his A. B. degree from Yale in 1896, and A. M. in 1900. Also in 1900 the degree of B. D., from the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge and D. D. from Gettysburg College in 1910.

In 1903 Mr. Stokes married Caroline Green, the daughter of Clarence Green Mitchell of New York.

Stokes made a tour of the world from 1896 to 1897, visiting Japan, China, Java, India and other points in the East. He was appointed secretary of Yale University in June, 1899, a deacon of the P. E. Church, 1900; assistant minister at St. Paul's, New Haven, 1900 to 1918. He was a Universalist preacher at several New England colleges, and from 1917 to 1919 was chairman of trustees of the American Universalist Union in Europe.

FOUNDER AND ORGANIZER.

He is secretary of the Phelps Stokes Foundation for educational work among negroes and a member of the General Educational Board, director of the American Academy in Rome, New Haven Hospital, Yale Foreign Missionary Society, Board of Religious Education (P. E. Church), trustee St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.

Stokes was the first director of the educational department of the Y. M. C. A., A. E. F.; proposed and organised the Army Educational Commission; was a founder of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, Lowell House (New Haven Settlement), Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor in 1919, and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and other organisations.

Secretary Stokes is the author of a number of religious and historical works and the editor of various university publications.

Make Your Own Gray Hair Remedy

Mrs. A. Dixon, a well-known Brooklyn trained nurse, made the following statement regarding gray hair: "Streaked, faded or gray hair can be quickly turned black, brown or light brown by the use of the following remedy that you can make at home:

"Merely get a box of Orlex powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extras to buy. Dissolve it in 2 oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Full directions for mixing and use and a gold bond guarantee come in each box. One box will last you for months.

"It is safe, it does not rub off, is not sticky or gummy, and leaves the hair fluffy. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."—Advertisement.

R. R. UNION HEAD SEES HARDING

Trainmen Skeptical Regarding Cummins-Esch Act, Says W. N. Doak

Marion, O., Jan. 5.—The railway workers of the country are not yet convinced that the operation of the transportation systems under the Cummins-Esch act will be entirely in their interests.

This was the statement of W. N. Doak, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, following a conference with President-elect Harding here.

"It will take two to three years of private operation of the railroads to determine in the minds of the workers whether the Cummins-Esch transportation act works out in their favor," said Doak.

This act provides for a 6 per cent. return on the capital stock of the roads, and sets up permanent machinery for the arbitration of railway wage disputes.

FRIENDLY TO LABOR.

Doak is one of the first labor leaders to confer with Senator Harding since the latter's return to Marion. He expressed confidence, following his interview, that the incoming Republican administration would be friendly to labor, and that the operation of the railroads under their private managements would prove successful.

It is understood that the railway labor leader took up with the President-elect the question of selecting the Secretary of Labor for the new Cabinet and discussed in detail the attitude of the Republican administration towards a number of labor issues.

Senator Harding's views on these various questions will be imparted by Doak to the executives of the other railway brotherhood in a conference to be held shortly in Washington, following which Doak will return to Marion for another interview with the President-elect, shortly before the latter's departure for the South.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAM.

Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago, former judge of the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, was the only other visitor on the Harding calendar. He came at the invitation of the President-elect for a discussion of the international program to be agreed upon by the new administration.

Injured Brighton Man Believed to Have Fallen After Getting Off Car

Thomas E. Cave, aged forty-five, of No. 148 Washington street, Brighton, is at St. Elizabeth's Hospital with a fractured skull and other injuries.

Cave was found lying on Commonwealth avenue near Brighton avenue by Patrolman Bernard of Station 14 and, when taken to the hospital, could not tell the authorities how he met with the accident.

The police are inclined to believe that Cave slipped and fell against an electric car he had alighted from. Passengers on a street car informed investigating officers that they heard a thud when the car was starting from the stop where the man was found.

THE EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING COMPANY OF BOSTON

DIVIDEND NO. 127

A quarterly dividend of three (3) per cent. has been declared, payable February 1, 1921, to stockholders of record at the close of business January 15, 1921.

T. K. CUMMINS, Treasurer.

Boston, January 4, 1921.

RAIL SLUMP IN SECOND HOUR

Oils Also Recede Under Concentrated Bear Pressure; Coppers Get More Support

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, there having been a further reaction in the second hour when bears concentrated selling pressure to a considerable extent upon rails and oils. Coppers had better support, but steels yielded with the list in general. The market was active, first hour transactions approximating 300,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent.

Foreign exchange rates were higher than before this week. Demand sterling advanced 3¼ cents to $3.58⅝ at the start. Early quotations were: Franc cables, 5.90; checks, 5.89; lire cables, 3.46; checks, 3.45; marks, 1.32; guilder cables, 31.65; checks, 31.55; Sweden kronen cables, 20.45; checks, 20.40.

Weakest stocks included American Can, Goodrich, Endicott Johnson, Sears Roebuck, Reading, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Norfolk & Western, Union Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio. Atlantic Gulf was off 3¼. Mexican Petroleum 4, Pan-American 2 and Royal Dutch 3⅝ at their morning lowest.

SMALL LOSSES AT OPENING.

The market had a weak opening, almost all active issues receding on first or early sales. Room traders operated as bears and offerings by this contingent exceeded demand from small investors or any other source. About all speculators in stocks are on the short side. Banking and business interests take a more hopeful view, judging from statements by leaders in finance and industry, but they are lending little if any support to securities. Early changes were small as a rule. Oils, rails and equipments were in the recessionals, but steels showed firmness at the start. The downward movement continued without a halt until late in the first hour. The market was still weak at the end of that period, but prices were above their lowest. Atlantic Gulf, Mexican Petroleum and Pan American sustained the largest losses. The drive against these issues was resumed at once.

LIBERTY BONDS HIGHER.

Liberty bonds were strong. The advance of these superfine securities is attributed to the patriotic advertising campaign of Kidder, Peabody & Co. This great banking house has done more within a few days to support these national obligations than the government that issued them. Every holder of these bonds has been benefited in particular and the country in general. They are worth clinging to during any period of business depression and personal stress.

The decline of rails up to mid-morning was fractional with the exception of Reading, which receded more than a point. Accumulation of these stocks is on a diminished scale. Contraction of traffic is going to be severely felt by most carriers this Winter. Recent earning reports of many have been strengthened by the movement of crops and fuel. This business is now at a minimum.

HIGH RECORD OIL OUTPUT LAST YEAR

Oil production by the United States in 1920 was the largest ever known in twelve months, totalling 443,000,000 barrels, or an average of 1,225,000 barrels a day. The increase over 1919 was 72,000,000, or 19 per cent.

But great as American production was it did not equal this country's requirements. They made it necessary to import 103,000,000 barrels from Mexico, where American capital controls 85 per cent. of the oil industry.

High Record Bank Clearings

A high record for bank clearings was established in New York on Monday, the first business day of this year. They totaled $1,422,063,788, as against $1,385,807,186 on January 2, 1920, when the previous high was attained. Year-end bank clearings and maturing Treasury bills contributed to making a high-record total for January 3, 1921.

Decrease in Public Debt

During the last quarter of last year the public debt was reduced $192,932,076, it is reported by the U. S. Treasury Department. At the end of December the total gross debt was $23,982,224,168, compared with $24,087,256,128 on September 30 last, and $26,596,701,648 on August 31, 1919, when the war debt was at its peak.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Jan. 5.—Aided by better reports from the textile trade, firm cables and the jump in foreign exchange the undertone of the cotton market showed a great improvement at the opening, prices advancing 33 to 68 points on first sales. Liverpool and room shorts were large buyers at the start, but the demand was supplied fully by New Orleans and Southern selling and shortly after the call a reaction of about 20 points occurred. Ginning to December 31 of 11,640,000 bales, as reported by the National Ginners Association, represented the largest amount for the period on record. The association estimated the crop at 13,200,000 bales. The market at the end of twenty minutes was active and about 25 points under the initial levels, but 25 points above last night's close. Opening prices were: Jan. 15.60, March 14.55, May 14.60, July 14.60, August 14.60, Sept. 14.70, Oct. 14.60.

Joplin Ore Production

It is stated by Otto Ruhl, mining engineer, that Joplin district ore production in 1920 broke all records. COPPERS FIRM IN BOSTON

Local Market Has Strong Start and Holds Gains; Curb Prices Ease Off

Stocks were strong in Boston at the opening of the senior exchange, gains as to losses during early trading being in the ratio of two to one. Trading was of about the same volume as during preceding sessions this week. It was of ordinary breadth. Coppers had a better tone, but business in this department was on a moderate scale. Packing shares had an irregular movement and there was little done in rails. New Haven was off a fraction during the morning, but some of the junior Boston & Maine issues advanced. Calumet & Hecla opened a point lower and sold at 254 several times subsequently.

The market was without a feature. American Sugar common receded nearly two points on its first sale. Boston & Maine D advanced six on one transaction. This road's A issue went up one. Point or more gains were made by Mohawk, Mexican Investment, St. Mary's Land and Edison. Island Creek and New River preferred sold off a point.

Among issues to make fractional gains were American Telephone, Copper Range, Isle Royale, Old Dominion, Quincy, North Butte, International Products, Carson Hill, Atlas Tack and U. S. Smelting. Small losses were shown by American Woolen preferred, Ventura, United Shoe, New England Telephone, National Leather, Swift International and Libby.

CURB GREW WEAK.

The Curb had an irregular opening, but this market soon grew weak on a small turnover. Price changes were small. Early leaders were Boston & Montana and Eureka. They figured in the decline. Among strong issues at the start or later were Chief, Crystal, Gadsden, Verde Mines and United Verde Extension. The last named sold ex-dividend and recovered the disbursement on its first sale.

At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was off 3 cents at 36 cents, Eureka 3 cents at 40 cents, Arizona Tip Top half a cent at 6 cents, Merrimac Development half a cent at 6 cents and Texana 4 cents at 10 cents. Chief was up 7-16 at 2 15-16.

WILL CELEBRATE GRID TRIUMPH

Undefeated Football Team to Be Dined by President, Faculty and Alumni

A victory dinner to the Boston College football team of 1920, the undefeated Eastern champions, will be given by the president, faculty and alumni of Boston College on the evening of January 12 at the auditorium of the Boston City Club.

Among the guests who have already accepted invitations to attend this function which officially closes the most successful season in the history of the college are: Governor Cox, Mayor Peters, Mayor Edwin C. Childs of Newton, John J. Mitchell, collector of internal revenue; C. G. Bancroft, James J. Phelan, Charles E. Brickley and Edwin L. Riley.

At this occasion a captain of the Boston College football team for 1921 will be elected. The letters and sweaters together with the gold football will be given to each of the players who have won these during the past season.

The Boston College orchestra and glee club have arranged a very pleasing program, while William D. Nugent, president of the Alumni Association, promises something unique in the form of a "feature."

HARVARD WOULD ROW SYRACUSE

Invitation Sent to Latter for Race on the Charles Next Spring

Harvard wants to meet Syracuse on the water. Manager Elmer Long of the Crimson varsity crew has wired an invitation to the Ten Eyck paddlers asking them to come here for a friendly brush on the Charles River some time next Spring. No definite date has been set, but if the fresh water oarsmen from the Salt City like the bid the day can be arranged.

Such a contest would be a great boost to the rowing game as far as the collegians can see. Syracuse has rowed to the top of the regular college river and stayed there for some time under the crafty tutelage of the Ten Eyck family. Harvard, on the other hand, has been satisfied to limit its glory to battles with Yale and celebrate in that sole victory over the Blue. With the Crimson stepping out to do battle with the "big guns," however, college rowing should climb a peg or perhaps two.

HARVARD TO NUMBER ICE TEAM MEMBERS

The Harvard hockey players are to be numbered this season, according to a decision reached by Coach Claflin of the Crimson seven with Ralph Winsor, the former coach.

20 MEN HIT FOR MORE THAN .300

Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis Cards Tops All With .370; Carey Leads Base Stealers

Twenty players, headed by Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals, hit in the .300 class in the National League during the season of 1920, according to the official batting averages made public today.

Hornsby captured the batting championship of big circuit with an average of .370, a mark that has been beaten but four times since 1900 and excelled only nineteen times over a stretch of forty-five years during which batting championship records have been kept.

The batting average of the new champion topped that of Fred Nicholson of the Pirates by ten points and Hornsby took part in 149 games, six less than his team played. In the first ten with Hornsby are Ross Young, New York, with .351; Ed Roush, Cincinnati, with .339; Smith, St. Louis, .332; Zach Wheat, Brooklyn, .328; Eddie Eayres, Boston, .328; Fred Williams, Philadelphia, .325; Milton Stock, St. Louis, .319; and Charley Hollocher, Chicago, .319.

Cardinals Lead in Team Batting

The batting strength of the St. Louis Cardinals is shown in the team averages. The Cards led their rivals as a team, hitting .289.

Max Carey, the fleet Pirate outfielder, led his league once again in stolen bases, pilfered a total of fifty-two. Carey has long been the best base runner in his league.

George Burns of New York, leads the run scorers with 115 runs. Not since 1911, when James Scheckard, of Chicago, tallied 121 runs, has any player reached this high mark in runs scored.

George Cutshaw, of Pittsburgh, is the leading sacrifice hitter, with thirty-seven to his credit.

Paul Poehler Wins

Worcester, Dec. 5.—Paul Poehler of Boston defeated William Eddy of this city, 1,096 to 965, in a ten-string candle-pin match. Poehler's third string, 133, was the highest scored.

FRIEDMAN NOW BOSS OF THE NEW ENGLAND BANTAMWEIGHTS

MONTREAL LOSES IN TITLE GO

Providence Boy Puts Up Game Battle, but Boston Rival Wins Decision

By NICK FLATLEY.

Abe Friedman was like Yum, over in New York—he never got a chance. Abe, as you may not know, is a bantamweight boxer. He deserted New York, came to Boston, and is now bantam champion of New England.

This blithe January day, little Abe is hurling challenges at the world's champion, nursing a sore ear and a lot of money and everything, and perfectly contented.

Little Abe snatched his new title away from Young Montreal of Providence at one of the finest shows the Armory Club ever staged. The bald pated boxer from Rhode Island is a mighty good battler, mighty good. He has a left hand that has discouraged more young chaps than the eighteenth amendment.

But he was outclassed when little Abe cut loose. From the first round till the tenth there never was the slightest doubt that the title was changing hands. Friedman kept his left glove in Montreal's face so much that that bird will taste leather for a month.

Montreal Always Ready for More

Abe bounced hooks and jolts off Montreal's midriff like hail off a tin roof. He had the scraway champion missing more frequently than a novice golfer, while he himself planted his snappy, well-calculated blows with the precision of a machine.

Montreal was game, and kept tearing in when the tide had turned hopelessly against him. But all he got for it was punishment. Friedman outboxed him, outfought him and outslugged him. The joust was so one-sided in fact that some of the big crowd left early, although the little fellows sparred throughout at a lightning pace.

Neither midget packed a sleep wallop. They were more like a couple of mosquitoes pecking away, dancing in and out, their arms flashing like pistons. Most of the Friedman socks landed, most of the Montreal wallops missed, and there you have the story of the battle.

Friedman Has Great Defence Against Left

The new champion came out with a great defence against the Montreal left, a mean punch. He covered up his jaw with his right glove, his lower works with his elbow, and the enemy never could get through. In the whole scrap the defeated champion didn't connect solidly more than half a dozen times.

Toward the finish Friedman made game of his victim, sidestepping and dodging blows with ridiculous ease. He had his title all tucked away and he knew it. It was a very satisfactory contest, though it did shock the individuals who made Montreal a three-to-one favorite before the cocky and perfectly conditioned Friedman cut loose his artillery.

Champions come and champions go, but there doesn't seem to be any in the bird on the horizon just now who can give the new king much bother, not in these parts at now. The defeated had no excuse to offer; he was in good shape, and tried his derndest, but he staggered into a lot more speed than he imagined was in the whole lot of bantams.

Even Victor Surprised at Result of Bout

The shifting of the title wasn't the only surprise of the show, not at all. Johnny Clinton lost the decision to Frankie Schoell of Buffalo. That was a surprise, even to Frankie, who couldn't seem to believe it.

The battler from Niagara Falls way put up a very good fight, he never stopped plunging in, no matter what hit him—and a whole lot did. But he was swinging as wildly as a pitcher against Walter Johnson. Some of his swings landed on the Clinton anatomy, but not nearly as many as went swishing over the shoulder, or bounced back off gloves and elbows.

Clinton, on the other hand, was at least as aggressive as his foe, and on several occasions, in the second and tenth — had the banjos strumming just under the Schoell haircut. Johnny carried a snappy left jab, that snaked out wickedly every so often and spoiled the rushes of the Buffalo youth.

Schoell Fought Hard Towards the End

The Schoell party fought hard toward the close, and forced the fighting, but as far as we could see, he never did have anything like the best of it. Clinton was far more effective, landed some very solid clouts, and breezed along as if he knew that he didn't have a thing to worry about. However, the judges must have seen a lot that we didn't.

This fight also was brisk and never idle, and had the audience howling frequently. Said audience had a swell chance to warm up while Mickey Kirst and Willie Jones were slam battering through eight rounds. These chunky young men stood and slugged away without ever a letup, and while Kirst won handily, the other fellow got almost as much credit for his gameness.

A breezy eight-rounder between Young Donahue and Young O'Brien opened the show, the former of the juniors getting the decision.

The Loafers in Football

Football Coach Zuppke, of Illinois, wants the rules changed so that a gain or score made by a man who recovers a fumbled ball should not be counted.

Zuppke holds that the man who usually makes such a gain or touchdown is one who lags behind waiting for such an opportunity, but at the same time letting his teammates do the real work.

It is a unique theory for football, but it is a condition often seen in other walks of life.

Many a lazy, half-cowardly fellow loafs along behind the scrimmage line of endeavor, hoping that someone will fumble an opportunity, and he will be able to scoop up the muffed chance and gallop off with it.

But the trouble for these loafers nowadays is that the boys on the scrimmage line, pulling and hauling against the vicissitudes of life, are getting more and more accurate in handling their chances.

They fumble mighty little. Competition is so keen they have to keep their eyes on the ball. Thus the loafer behind has a long wait, although waits are something loafers do not mind.

Sometimes he has a long beard before he discovers a fumble, and by that time, not infrequently, his own hands have become so clumsy from disuse, and his legs so flabby, that he can neither seize the opportunity, nor run away with it.

Still, Zuppke is right in one respect. The loafer shouldn't be permitted to score.

NEW OFFICERS NAMED BY TERRIERS' CLUB

At the regular monthly meeting of the Boston Terrier Breeders' Club at Huntington Chambers the nomination and election of officers for 1921 resulted as follows: President, H. L. Flynn; vice-president, Harry Palmer; secretary, Mrs. Henry Daniels; treasurer, Mrs. J. Storrow.

The club voted unanimously to hold their annual banquet on January 28 at Huntington Chambers, for the members and friends of terrier breeders.

B. C. Hockey Squad in Arena Practice

Fred Rocque ran up against a snag in his work with the Boston College hockey squad, the snag being in the form of the usual "January thaw." A cold snap would have been welcomed joyously at University Heights, but at present the rinks there are out of commission.

Rocque had a chance to look over the work of his charges at the Arena and will have another tomorrow evening, but he will be forced to send his seven against the speedy Bates aggregation at Lewiston Saturday, with scant preparation.

The big factor for the Maroon and Gold is experience, since the same seven will probably start next Saturday that played last season.

Captain Leo Hughes, Ed Garrity, Ben Healy, Ed O'Connor and Curry were the veteran forwards. On the defense were the Morrissey brothers, with Ed O'Brien and Don McClusky in the net. "Gitch" Gurley of Dorchester, Morrissey of Arlington, George Kelly of Medford and Maher of B. C. High are the most promising new candidates.

Manager McInerney is trying to arrange a match with New Hampshire State for Friday so that the Maroon and Gold septet could stop at Durham Friday and go on to Lewiston Saturday morning. The team will return to Boston Sunday.

FLYNN AND CARNEY IN QUINCY FEATURE

Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Quincy Boxing Club has completed his program for his show tomorrow night. The semi final of eight rounds will find Joe Stone of Weymouth battling with Young Davies of Manchester, N. H. One-Round Bennett of Quincy and Eddie Fay of Roxbury will travel the six-round distance as will Jimmy Gardiner and Jimmy Merry, both of Quincy.

Paddy Flynn and Billy Carney, who mingle in the feature tussle of ten rounds, are busy preparing for the frolic. The boys are well matched and should furnish Quincy fans with the best bout that has been offered them in several months.

Jordan Wins 33; Draws 14

Alfred Jordan, the English checker expert, won 33 and drew 14 matches in a simultaneous exhibition on 47 boards last night at the Wells Memorial. Lavender, T. Mahoney and M. Kiley.

SHE hissed at him. "After all dad has done for me, do you think I'd ask him to stand for a hold-up like this?"

"All right—all right—just another suggestion—let's forget it," he continued blandly. He recrossed his legs. "But Jennie, I can't help you out with any more ideas; that's all I'd thought of. It's up to you now to think of a way. How you do it is all the same to me. My only concern is, I've simply got to have the money."

For all his pleasant manner she realised that he intended having it. So she fell to bargaining over the amount, and finally she got him down to where he admitted that three thousand might pull him through what he termed his "emergency."

"But, keep this in mind, Jennie; however you get the money, you are not even to hint that you are getting it for me," he said as he was leaving, menace showing through his voice. "I've got things fixed so that if anything happens to me, the whole business about you will come out automatically. You're a wise child, Jennie—and I guess you understand."

The next instant his tone had its previous blandness. "I'm sure you're not going to have any trouble. Believe me, I wouldn't have bothered you like this if I hadn't been suddenly right up against it. And remember this: We're going right on being the same good friends as before."

After Slim's departure she still had time to have gone to Mrs Shipman's tea, but she had forgotten all about it. In a panic she sat considering this new turn in her affairs. As she reviewed the situation she acknowledged that Slim, from Slim's standpoint, had played his cards with amazing cleverness. He had swung to her side when he had seen this course to be to his advantage, he had helped make her marriage possible; and he had held back until he thought she dared not refuse. What an unguessed number of women might he not have trapped with his fertile ingenuity—women who dared not speak!

And if she should rebel, try to break free, Slim would surely topple her from her lofty place; she would lose this great wonderful world which with such patience and daring she had conquered. And Kenneth! What would Kenneth do when he learned the truth?

She dared not think of these things; she averted her mind from them. She must first of all satisfy Slim's demand and so she forced her mind to consider ways and means for meeting her present crisis.

CHAPTER XXXI
JENNIE FINDS A WAY

JENNIE had a personal bank account, but the deposits in it had never represented more than her spending money, and now it held almost nothing. She had few jewels; this once she regretted her quiet wedding, which naturally had reduced to insignificance the giving of valuable presents; and the sale or pledging of her few jewels, besides being an inadequate procedure, might cause embarrassing questions when their absence was noticed. Yes, Slim had listed every possible method.

That evening, on the way to a dinner party, she began to work upon Kenneth, her idea being exactly what Slim had suggested, to secure a considerable sum for the purchase of jewels and then spend a small part of it in purchasing passable imitations. She had never before directly asked him for money, and she found it hard.

"Kenneth, do you think I wear too many jewels?"

"I should say not!" he declared. It had been a good day for him; on the books he had made a great deal of money and he was in a generous humor. "I wish you had a lot more jewels—you'd do them honor!"

Encouraged by this she went on: "I saw a wonderful pearl necklace today at——" mentioning a famous jeweler's, "and I tried it on, and I simply fell in love with it."

"Go ahead and buy it."

"Thanks, dear!" She held his arm close for a moment. "But they told me that it had been ordered 'reserved' by another woman—practically sold to her. They said they really didn't care to risk selling it over the other customer's head unless they sold it for cash. It's four thousand dollars."

"Four thousand dollars cash!" He laughed. "Why, Jennie, I haven't seen four thousand dollars all at once since we've been married. My own money, I mean. I've been making a lot, of course, but it's all tied up. I'm putting it up as margin on new stocks. We're due for a big cleanup, Jennie. Ready money now—there isn't such a thing! That's no reason, though, why you shouldn't have a necklace," he consoled her. "Find another that suits you and get it—only buy in a place where I have credit. And I say, Jennie, after you have looked things over, I'll come along and help you make the final choice."

Jennie saw that this way of raising money was closed to her. "You're awfully good, Kenneth. But I don't really need the necklace, and if money is so tight now, I'd rather wait until it's easier again."

Jennie considered other possibilities. Slim's suggestion that she resort to her natural gift for forgery did not occupy her mind for a moment. And his suggestion, based upon his cynical conception of her relation with Mr. Shipman, that she ask help from the financier, took no more of her time for a negative decision to be reached. This elimination narrowed her possibilities down to her father. When she considered approaching him, she felt guilty; during these last few months of her rapid rise, she had hardly thought of him at all, and her once sharply defined purpose of having his name cleared when she had gained place and influence, she had been putting off until now it was almost forgotten. But there was no other way out of her situation, she had to see her father; and on the morning following her talk with Kenneth about jewels, she transmitted a message to her father through the medium of Uncle George.

She Dined Out Alone

That evening she dined out alone; she had known in advance that press of business was going to keep Kenneth downtown until late. On arriving at her hostess' house in the East Sixties she dismissed her chauffeur for the night, saying that a friend had promised to drive her home. At 10 o'clock she excused herself to her hostess, saying she had promised to [illegible]. The night was raw, and a blustering wind swirled through the street. This gave her plausible reason for wrapping her scarf around hair and face and holding her cloak closely beneath her chin so that she was completely muffled except for her eyes. Only one who knew her well could have identified her. She slipped around the corner, and southward through Madison avenue, and then west through Sixtieth street to the New Netherland Hotel, where she secured a taxicab. Ten minutes later she was ringing the bell of Uncle George's apartment.

Uncle George himself admitted her and gripped her hand. "Sent my Jap out tonight; he's safe enough when he knows everything, but he's still safer when he doesn't know anything." He helped her out of her coat and scarf, and then motioned up the hallway. "Jerry's waiting in my sitting room."

Black Jerry was already on his feet when she entered. She came to a hesitating pause. He gazed at her in embarrassed wonderment. For the first time in his life he was seeing his daughter in an evening gown—and a gown whose shimmering elegance was a symbol of the unbeatable place which she had attained. Four times he had seen her since he had sent her away from the Pekin that far gone night in a cheap serge suit—and now here she was, this dazzling creature! It did not seem possible!

Before he had recovered she had crossed and kissed him. He was incapable of returning her kiss. His emotion self-defensively sought refuge in gruff rebuke.

"I told you you wasn't to see me again, and you promised you wouldn't! You know what an awful risk it is!"

"I know, dad, but something's happened that makes it a bigger risk for me not to see you than for me to see you. I simply had to see you."

"What's the matter?"

She told them all—Uncle George had entered just behind her—holding back only the identity of Slim Jackson. "I can't get the money from Kenneth," she ended, "and if I don't pay I'll be pretty certain to be exposed and that will end things. Since your money and your work and your thinking—yours and Uncle George's—have put me where I am, and since what I have become belongs in a way to you, I felt I had to see you and ask what you wanted me to do."

Black Jerry ignored all the latter part of her statement. "Who's the guy that's holding you up?" he demanded grimly. And then sharply: "Is it Slim Jackson?"

She remembered the soft menace in Slim's parting words. "No it's not Slim Jackson," she replied in a convincing tone. And in that instant memory performed one of its odd tricks: it flashed upon her that long ago she had lied to save Slim Jackson from his share of blame for that forged Morrison check which had brought her into the Women's Night Court—and here again she was lying to save him.

"Was it Casey?" demanded Jerry.

"No," Jennie answered.

"Sure not," agreed Uncle George. "Casey is one square cop."

"Was it the judge who tried you that night—you remember?"

"No it was not the judge."

"Then who is this guy?" Jerry asked, almost explosively.

"I'd better not tell you—in fact, he's fixed it so I don't dare tell you—that is, unless you want things to end right now. Whether you want things to end, that's what you've got to decide first."

[illegible] of silence. "Jerry," Uncle George said presently, "we overlooked one little bet when we planned this business years ago. It never came into our thick old heads that, after we'd landed Jennie him, some pleasant son-of-a-gun might tumble to it all and put the screws on Jennie.

No. 6. AND WALKS IN CHAINS FOREVER-MORE, LOVE-LED!

ON a day a man saunters out into the blithsome world—fancy and care free—not thinking of there being any eyes in the world but the pair he sees the good things around him with. There's a kind, clear blue sky looking wondrously beautiful and far above him. There are bare branches singing in the wind. There's a sleek black starling—Englishman that he is, takin' a bath in icewater wherever he can find it—whistling at him like a signalling buoy from a swinging branch. There's a kind, free, homely look on all the faces he passes.

And then lo! . . . because behind a bare tall tree lurk and peep a tiny rosy child and a wisp of a woman-girl, the world shifts and all its meanings change. Because they lie in wait and because it is his destiny to know what a pair of bright eyes can do, looking out at him from the softness of a girl's dear face. At first she will have none of him—after making him well aware—never to be free of her way and her eyes. She does not see him. She is looking the other way. They are friends, and already the world is beginning to grow from one thing to another—from a place of careless rest to one of discomfort and strange unrests. It will be some time before he looks at the sky again often and finds it wondrous blue.

Then one day she raises her eyes and finds him in the world of her heart and confounds him utterly, like a man in a diner for the first time. Comes a day when his heart is so soft and fond that he must buy her something—a gift to see her smile and crinkle her shining eyes.

And when she smiles he is beginning to find the sky and the starlings again, but the sky is kinder and more wondrous blue— a thing to be amazed at and to marvel upon—such as it was never in the days before his Fate came by, this gang of two, and hopped out on him; and the starlings are thought upon—that in Winter they go hungry often—and the man throws bread to them from his window and laughs to see them drag it about, with whistles in between—themselves in their sleek dress clothes in the snow. Perhaps it's a dog he buys—the bond between! Comes another day when she presses his cheeks in her soft hands and dotes upon him, and kisses him of her own will and owns to being his darling.

Thereafter the man who set forth—ignorant of bright eyes and their will to enslave—walks in chains forevermore.

And he sees the sky again—now a faery blue—leading his eyes on from blue depth to depth, from void to void, and his breast swells and exults when he puts back his head and looks at it.

"AND we realise that, in order to change ourselves, an actual regeneration of the will is necessary. For a while, perchance, we despair of this. The effort to get out of the rut we have made for ourselves seems of no avail. And it is not indeed until we arrive gradually or otherwise, and through a proper interpretation of the life of Christ, at the conviction that we may even now become useful in the divine scheme that we have a sense of what is called 'the forgiveness of sins.' This conviction, this grace, this faith to embark on the experiment accomplishes of itself the revival of the will, the rebirth which we had thought impossible. We discover our task, high or humble—our cause. We grow marvelously at one with God's purpose, and we feel that our will is acting in the same direction as His. And through our own atonement we see the meaning of that Atonement which led Christ to the Cross. We see that our conviction, our grace, has come through Him, and how He died for our sins."

"It's quite wonderful how logical and simple you make it, how thoroughly you have gone into it. You have solved it for yourself—and you will solve it for others—many others."

She rose, and he, too, got to his feet with a medley of feelings. The path along which they walked was already littered with green acorns. A gray squirrel darted ahead of them, gained a walnut and paused, quivering halfway up the trunk, to gaze back at them. And the glance she presently gave him seemed to partake of the shyness of the wild thing.

"Thank you for explaining it to me," she said.

"I hope you don't think——" he began.

"Oh, it isn't that!" she cried, with unmistakable reproach. "I asked you—I made you tell me. It hasn't seemed at all like—the confessional," she added, and smiled and blushed at the word. "You have put it so nicely, so naturally, and you have given me so much to think about. But it all depends—doesn't it?—upon whether one can feel the underlying truth of which you spoke in the first place; it rests upon a sense of the prevailing goodness of things. It seems to me cruel that what is called salvation, the solution of the problem of life, should depend upon an accidental discovery. We are all turned loose with our animal passions and instincts of self-preservation, by an indifferent Creator, in a wilderness, and left to find our way out as best we can. You answer that Christ showed us the way. There are elements in his teaching I cannot accept—perhaps because I have been given a wrong interpretation of them. I shall ask you more questions some day.

"But even then," she continued, "granted that Christ brought the complete solution, as you say, why should so many millions have lived and died, before and after His coming, who had suffered so, and who had never heard of him? That is the way my reason works, and I can't help it. I would help it if I could."

"Isn't it enough," he asked, "to know that a force is at work combating evil,—even if you are not yet convinced that it is a prevailing force? Can you not trust that it will be a prevailing force, if your sympathies are with it, without demanding a revelation of the entire scheme of the universe? Of what use is it to doubt the eternal justice?"

"Oh, use!" she cried. "I grant you its uselessness. Doubt seems an ingrained quality. I can't help being a fatalist."

"And yet you have taken your life in your own hands," he reminded her, gently.

"Only to be convinced of its futility," she replied.

Again, momentarily thrust back into himself, he wondered jealously once more what the disillusionments had been of that experience from before which she seemed, at times, ready to draw back a little the veil.

"A sense of futility is a sense of incompleteness," he said, "and generally precedes a sense of power."

"Ah, you have gained that! Yet it must always have been latent in you—you make one feel it. But now!" she exclaimed, as though the discovery had just dawned on her, "now you will need power, now you will have to fight as you have never fought in your life."

He found her enthusiasm as difficult to withstand as her stoicism.

"Yes, I shall have to fight," he admitted. Her partisanship was sweet.

"When you tell them what you have told me," she continued, as though working it out in her own mind, "they will never submit to it, if they can help it. My father will never submit to it. They will try to put you out, as a heretic—won't they?"

"I have an idea that they will," he conceded, with a smile.

"And won't they succeed? Haven't they the power?"

"It depends, in the first place, on whether the bishop thinks me a heretic."

"Have you asked him?"

"No."

"But can't they make you resign?"

"They can deprive me of my salary."

She did not press this.

"You mustn't think me a martyr," he pleaded, in a lighter tone.

She paid no heed to this protest, but continued to regard him with a face lighted by enthusiasm.

"Oh, that's splendid of you!" she cried. "You are going to speak the truth as you see it, and let them do their worst. Of course, fundamentally, it isn't merely because they're orthodox that they won't like it, although they'll say so, and perhaps think so. It will be because — if you have really found the truth—they will instinctively fear its release. For it has a social bearing, too—hasn't it?—although you haven't explained that part of it."

"It has a distinct social bearing," he replied, amazed at the way her mind flew forward and grasped the entire issue, in spite of the fact that her honesty still refused to concede his premises. Such were the contradictions in her that he loved. And, though she did not suspect it, she had in her the Crusader's spirit. "I have always remembered what you once said, that many who believed themselves Christians had an instinctive feeling that there is a spark in Christianity which, if allowed to fly, would start a conflagration beyond their control. And that they had covered the spark with ashes. I, too," he added whimsically, "was buried under the ashes."

"And the spark," she demanded, "is not Socialism—their nightmare?"

"The spark is Christianity itself—but I am afraid they will not be able to distinguish it from Socialism. The central paradox in Christianity consists in the harmonising of the individual and socialistic spirit, and this removes it as far from the present political doctrine of socialism as it is possible to be. Christianity, looked at from a certain viewpoint,—and I think the proper viewpoint,—is the most individualistic of religions, since its basic principle is the development of the individual into an autonomous being."

They stood facing each other on an open stretch of lawn. The place was deserted. Through the trees, in the near distance, the sightless front of the Ferguson mansion blazed under the September sun.

AN ABSORBING STORY OF UP-TO-DATE AMERICA

CHAPTER XXXVI.

MRS. THROCKMORTON chaperoned her daughter to the dance, although chaperonage was quite unnecessary, Mary had often insisted in town. But here, at this fashionable resort, she wanted to comply with the strictest rules of etiquette. If one erred at all it must be one the side of propriety.

Lewis Sheldon saw that Mrs. Throckmorton was comfortably seated in a corner towards which many patrons had gravitated. Most of these greeted her politely; none of them was effusive—a fact which he noted.

He knew as well as did others of his set that the Throckmortons were what he would have called "corn-fed;" that they had only recently made enough money to enable them to push their way into society.

But that they had the money to do this was the main thing. Sheldon loved money; he was also attracted by this girl who spent it lavishly. Suppose her father was a self-made man? His money was as good as that of the men who had inherited theirs—and he had, if report was to be believed, more than many better-born men possessed. Moreover, his daughter was pretty, fairly well-educated and had a distinguished style and bearing.

When she was married, she would belong to her husband's circle—and her parents would go back West.

Lewis Sheldon had expensive tastes. Money had always been a necessity to him. He had used it as fast as he had come into possession of it, sometimes by means that he would not care to reveal. Anyway one of the easiest methods of becoming rich was to marry wealth. And he admired Mary Throckmorton for herself as well as for her fortune.

He had come to Newport determined to win her, if possible—or at least to impress himself upon her heart to such an extent that when she returned to town she would prefer him to other men. He had striven all Winter to win her regard—but was not satisfied with the results.

Two Against Him

He had been convinced that there were two persons working against him. One was Mary's brother, who did not like this suitor of his sister's. The other man was Mortimer Lawrence, who, he suspected, cherished an undeclared fondness for the heiress of the Throckmorton millions.

Here in Newport Sheldon could forward his suit, undeterred by either of the men who were opposed to him. He had an uncomfortable idea that Peter Throckmorton had heard some ugly stories about an unfortunate occurrence at cards in which Lewis Sheldon had figured. Lewis had managed to hush up this story—and nobody but Lawrence knew all the facts.

And Lawrence was too magnanimous, for some reason, to make those facts public. The magnanimity Sheldon could not forgive. Small natures cannot forgive those to whom they owe much.

Mary Throckmorton was the prettiest girl at the dance this Saturday evening. Men crowded around her, eager to meet her. These men were only casual acquaintances, and Sheldon assured himself that he had nothing to fear from them. Indeed, their admiration for the girl whom he would win only enhanced her value in his eyes.

If he could but make her care for him, he could snap his fingers in the faces of Peter Throckmorton and Mortimer Lawrence.

Some such thought moved him to speak more warmly than was his custom as, a dance ended, he led Mary to a seat in a secluded niche of the room back of the dance hall.

"That was a wonderful waltz," he murmured, "the most wonderful I have ever had. And it was because I had it with you."

She felt suddenly afraid that he was going to tell her that he loved her.

"Oh," she sighed. "How hot it is! I wish I had a glass of that punch I saw in the hall."

"Let's go get some," he proposed.

But she shook her head. "No—please get it for me," she pleaded. "I don't want to push through all that crowd."

Mary Overhears

As he left her, she glanced about her and caught a glimpse of Irene Lawrence and the man with whom she had been dancing crossing the lower end of the room. It was, therefore, with suprise that, several minutes later, Mary heard her erstwhile friend's voice just back of where she herself sat.

A screen of palms sepaarted the speaker from the listener—a screen that either could have seen through had she tried to.

"Yes," Irene was saying, "they dance well together. Sheldon needs cash badly, by the way, if one can believe rumors of his gambling, etc. I wish, for my part, that he would marry her—money and all. But he probably won't. If he did, she would let Mortimer alone."

Mary started, pressing her hands tightly together, and, in spite of herself, listened.

"Why—I thought it was the other way," was the languid rejoinder, "and that Mortimer was much taken with Miss Throckmorton's beautiful eyes."

Irene's laugh was disagreeable. "Hardly—but he is not a fast runner. And she—is—well, a little fast. But what can you expect from her antecedents?"

The man spoke again. "What is the matter with them?"

"Oh," with another laugh, "they are common, that's all. They got their money out of shoes, when the government had to have them for our men. Give the brother and sister a year longer here and they'll show what they are. I hoped at first they would stand taking up. But they don't.

"The girl is, as I said, rapid. The brother—well, he has a chorus girl in tow. Don't those things show what stuff the family is made of?"

The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER LX.

MR. CHASE had marched Gomez into the office of the president of the company and said: "At last I believe we have found the channel through which our valuable information has been leaking." Then turning to Gomez he said sternly: "Come on, now, and confess your part in it." Gomez maintained his innocence and stuck to the story he had first told. "That Miss Sheridan when he tried to kiss her had thrown the paper-weight at him." At this Mr Chase's fists clenched and he was about to strike Gomez when the president of the company, cool and collected, touched a buzzer under his desk and asked his secretary: "Have Miss Sheridan come in and let's have her version of the affair."

Ann told them again of Gomez and her former suspicion and what he had done when he entered Mr Chase's office. Then the president of the company turned and said "I'm sorry, Gomez, you have had a very good position with us and were in line for even a better place, but you chose the wrong path, so we will have to let you go. Besides being a crook you also try to blacken this young lady's character. If I were a younger man I should take great pleasure in kicking you downstairs. As it is, you shall go to the cashier and get what's coming to you."

Not long after the above-mentioned incident the president of Montgomery & Co., Ltd., decided to retire and give way to a younger man. Chase was appointed to the position. In telling Ann of his new position he smiled and said: "Miss Sheridan, you have just been made secretary to the president of the company." "But I don't want it, Mr. Chase," Ann answered him. "I would rather work for you." "You will still be doing so," Chase laughingly said, "I'm the president."

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

IF you honestly feel you've not had a square deal, do you sigh, do you cry, do you grumble and squeal? Do you make out a list of the good things you've missed, and sit down with a frown just because you exist? Then you're on the wrong track; that's why things look so black; the grimace on your face is what's setting you back. You may sighingly say: "Nothing works out my way; it's my cue to be blue and to scatter dismay!" You might know, poor old soul, you'd get stuck in a hole if you try to get by in that woebegone role. Here and now is the place you should take a big brace; you should say: "Hip, hooray, for a glorious race!" Though the task looks too hard, buckle to it old pard; handicaps will perhaps lighten up yard by yard. If you honestly sigh: "Others get all the pie," toil and sweat, you'll forget there's a cloud in your sky. Though you lack Johnson's pelf, don't curl up on a shelf; don't declare: "It's not fair!" but be square with yourself. Things were run on this plan since the very first man; just attend to your end, be as square as you can.

No Choice

A soldier in one of the military hospitals during the war had in his possession a watch of quaint and foreign design, of which he was very proud. The doctor seeing it one day became very interested. "Where did you get this from?" he inquired. "A boche gave it to me," was the reply. The doctor's curiosity being aroused, he inquired how the enemy had come to convey this token of esteem and affection. "'E had to!" was the laconic reply.

NEW YORK AND CHICAGO—On the eve of the new year, the artists of both New York and Chicago celebrated. In each city an "artists' ball" was held. LIKE BEES ABOUT A COMB—This unusual photograph shows Japanese women laborers coaling a big passenger vessel at Nagasaki, Japan. REVENUE AGENTS INVADE WISCONSIN WOODS—What was probably the most spectacular raid since prohibition came into effect occured at the town of Hurley, Wisconsin, recently. Hurley has always been known in the West as a town which objected to outside interference. Hurley decided that prohibition was an imposition on community rights. Fifty Federal agents disagreed and the result was that fifty-eight violators and thirty-eight saloons were "pinched." The figure eight furnished a good parlay. The photos above tell their own story. (Int.)

JEALOUS HUSBAND SHAVES HIS WIFE'S HEAD—Mrs. Matilda Boufis claimed, in a divorce suit filed at Los Angeles seven years ago, that her husband shaved her head because he was jealous of the attention other men were giving her and her wonderful head of hair. The suit was dismissed but the husband believed it had been granted. Now the husband is suing for a decree on the grounds of desertion. The two photographs were a part of the evidence in the original suit. (c) International.

"CLARENCE" IS LAUGHING HIT

Booth Tarkington's Comedy at the Hollis a Pleasing Novelty

By FRED J. McISAAC
Dramatic Editor

"Clarence," a comedy in four acts by Booth Tarkington, is being performed at the Hollis Street Theatre, and Boston can consider itself in luck.

When Booth Tarkington dies and goes to Heaven everybody will be around admitting that he came closer to being the great American author than anybody else, because better than anybody else, he could present the American brand of human nature in its most interesting and amusing moments.

From a technical standpoint it is possible to complain about things in "Clarence," but a critic who has only managed to straighten his face with difficulty and still has a stitch in his side from continuous laughter ought to be ashamed of himself for doing such a thing.

STAR HAS PERSONALITY.

And here goes my critical pickaxe out the sanctum window and I hope it hits no innocent passer-by on the head.

"Clarence" is the result of Mr. Tarkington finding Mr. Alfred Lunt. Alfred Lunt is a long, angular, twitching, peering, likeable sort of person, with a personality as original and protected by patents as that of William Hodge or Raymond Hitchcock.

Along with "Clarence" Mr. Tarkington dug his familiar boy and girl personalities of previous plays, novels and short stories, added a silly woman, fair, fat and forty, a pretty young governess, a tired business man and some fantastic servants. Result, three hours of loud and continuous laughter, as the press agent will tell you in the advs.

Clarence turns up in the first act as a discharged soldier whose uniform doesn't fit him and whose stupidity is so appalling that nobody can believe it possible.

HITS IT SOFT.

How he becomes the centre of a discontented millionaire's family, makes them all happy, marries the governess and generally hits it soft, is the story of the play.

Alfred Lunt has come to stay on the American stage. They say he is a Finn by birth. I don't care if he is an Esquimo. Al, give us your flipper.

Next in point of merry making comes Mary Boland, a very clever actress, who makes of the silly, middle aged wife a wonderful and lifelike study.

Phoebe Foster is an ingenue whose sweetness and charm will be remembered from the "Cinderella Man." I regret to state that Phoebe has been eating too much candy, that makes her sweeter but more bounteous.

Viola Harper, a charming little actress, does the young girl so successfully that you do not regret Helen Hayes, who created the part. Russell Medcraft, as the adolescent youth, made you unpleasantly fearful that he actually had St. Vitus' dance, but he put over all his lines.

John Flood, as the worried business man; Agnes Findlay, as the maid; Barlowe Borland, as a Scottish butler, and William Lorenz, as a middle-aged lover, all earn their salary checks.

TRAINS MAKE SPECIAL STOPS AT WELLESLEY

With the reopening of Wellesley College today after the holiday recess and a returning tide of students from all over the East, the Boston & Albany Railroad operated extra cars, making special stops at Wellesley. One entire extra train was run from Chicago, arriving in Boston at noon and making a special stop at the college town. Most of the passengers were students. The regular Twentieth Century Limited, the New York train arriving in Boston at 4:05, one from the West due at 10:50 p. m., and the Berkshire express all made special stops to accommodate the students.

BOSTON'S COAL SUPPLY UNDER HALF OF NORMAL

Boston has more than 50,000 tons of coal on hand, say incomplete reports received from local coal dealers by Boston's fuel administrator, Malcolm C. Nichols. This figure is expected to be increased to 60,000 tons next week, double the amount on hand six weeks ago. Under normal conditions, however, there should be 126,000 tons on hand at this time of year.

How many holes to put in each groove and the size of the whole.
Chicopee Falls. C. K.

Would advise that you get new rings and pistons or possibly oversized rings would overcome your trouble. Holes are sometimes bored below the last ring, but would not advise it. We feel sure new rings will stop your trouble unless your pistons are very much worn, in which case you may have to have new ones fitted. Should you still wish to try the other method would advise about four one-sixteenth inch holes below the last ring on each piston.

Dear Mr. Fixit:
I have a late 1920 Maxwell car and every five gallons of gas I have to put in two quarts of oil to keep the needle float full. Thanking you in advance for any help you might be able to give me, I am, E. D.
Glendale, R. I.

Your oil may be leaking out of your main bearings or between the gasket or your crank case. It is also possible that your oil float may leak, which would cause it to sink below its proper level. Turn all of the oil out of your reservoir and fill it up. It should hold five and one-half quarts. Then spread a piece of paper under your car and start your engine. This ought to show you if any oil is leaking out.

Dear Mr. Fixit:
Have a little trouble and I would be much obliged if you would help me to solve it. My car is a 1920 Ford with a self-starter. The motor has a skip when running on the mag. but when I switch to the battery it is O. K. As the current runs on practically the same wires in both instances it has me puzzled. Also my battery runs down so that it will not turn the motor, if it does not start almost instantly. When it does start the battery comes right up again in five minutes only to do the same thing over again in five minutes. The generator charges ten all of the time. Thanking you in advance, I am A. D. W.
Watertown.

Your trouble must lie in the wire which leads from the magneto to the switch, as this is the only wire that is not used on both circuits. The short circuit may be in the magneto plug itself, the wire or the switch. Examine all of these carefully for loose connections, worn insulation, etc. In regard to the battery running down, you may have a short circuit in the cut-out. The battery has evidently been discharged and not fully recharged. Have it looked over and fully charged and see if your trouble does not cease.

TOBACCO WAR OVER PRICES

Planters Threaten Violence to Manufacturers' Agents Because of Low Bids

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 5.—Tobacco planters of Kentucky have declared war on big tobacco manufacturers of the country. The planters charge the manufacturers with forcing prices down to ridiculous levels. Buyers for the manufacturers were threatened with violence.

The Lexington market was closed today after buyers refused to bid more than a fractional part of what the planters believed they ought to get for their tobacco. Some bids were as low as one-half cent a pound for tobacco that sold at seventy-five cents last season. The best grade of tobacco brought bids of only thirty-five cents a pound, compared with one dollar a pound a year ago.

Reports received from various tobacco centres indicated trouble of a serious nature is impending.

English Company's Example of Railroad Sabotage

The Great Western Railroad in England is giving us a typical example of railroad sabotage. We understand from the current reports of the British press that the British Government is taking up the question of harnessing the tide in the Severn. This is an estuary of the sea into which the tides rush with great force and volume. And in the Spring it even rises as high as forty-five feet. For a long time there has been a discussion of damming the Severn so that the tide might flow in freely, and then when it turned be trapped by the closing of the sluices. At the sluices it was proposed to put turbines so that the water of the outgoing tides as they flowed through the sluices might make electricity.

This scheme is not new. It has been discussed for a long time, but it now looks as if it would bear fruition, because it happens that the Great Western Railway Company is now interested. The Great Western Railway Company is a privately owned railroad, which like the other great English railroads is now under government hands, but which the government has promised to return to its private owners. The tunnel under the Severn is unprofitable to the company and the railroad wants a bridge across the Severn. The viaduct for the utilization of the tides to make electricity would be a very good bridge for the railroad, hence the revival of the idea that this tide scheme is feasible.

It was not feasible until the Great Western became interested in it. Now it appears to be very feasible, and it is not less feasible because it would cost today $150,000,000, when eight years ago when it was first broached it would have cost only $40,000,000. What is a little matter of $110,000,000 when the private interests of a railroad are concerned?

It reminds us a good deal of the way our American railroads destroyed our magnificent system of canals so that they might be rid of the competition by the canals in the low grade, slow moving freight, which can be carried by water so much more cheaply than it can be carried by rail. The railroads, with their watered stock, could not begin to compete with the canals, so they destroyed them by hook or crook, and now that they are destroyed whenever the business of the country is good the railroads under private management are not able to do all the business of the country, but choke up and then call to the government for help.

Laws Are Laws, but Some Seem to Be Different

The Eighteenth Amendment having become a part of the Constitution of the United States, the law embodying its enforcement must be carried into effect. The assiduity of the revenue agents in carrying out the provisions of the law is creditable.

There is, however, nothing in our Constitution or in our long list of Federal statutes which gives one law pre-eminence over another or which makes it more important to enforce one law than to enforce another law.

We have laws against profiteering, against graft, against unfair competition and against the oppression of the people by unjust, powerful combinations of men or corporations.

Are these laws being enforced as assiduously and as promptly as the prohibition law? Are "malefactors of great wealth" and get-rich-quick patriots "rounded up" as promptly and as regularly as bootleggers, saloon keepers and illicit vendors of "hootch"?

Is the enforcement of one law merely a screen to hide the administration's disregard of the violation of other laws? Is a coal operator who by extortion raises his profits from $100 to $4,000 a day less criminal than a small excise violator?

It takes about seven years for the United States Supreme Court to decide that a railroad has been mulcting the public and another year for the Attorney-General to put a stop to the practice—maybe. In less than seven days a "hootch" peddler is caught, raided, arraigned, sentenced, fined. Why does Attorney-General Palmer go fishing only for minnows?

Guard the Benefits of the Daylight Saving Law

The opponents of the daylight savings law are arming themselves for another battle against the daylight saving, which has given so great a majority of our people so much pleasure and health. Although the minority which does not want the daylight saving law is insignificant in numbers, yet it has a disproportionate influence, because it counts among its adherents the electric lighting companies, which, like all public service corporations, enjoy political power so menacing to American democracy.

Therefore if we wish to retain the benefits of the daylight saving law we must be on our guard.

Radcliffe Asks a Modest $300,000,000 Endowment

The graduates of Radcliffe College met in their Agassiz House at Cambridge the other day to provide ways and means to raise the modest endowment sum of $300,000,000.

With the new dispensation for women, combined with the fact that the girls of Radcliffe get the same kind of instruction that is given the boys, and generally make more of it, there ought not to be much difficulty in raising $300,000.

Mayor's Duty to Insist on Sprinklers to Save Lives

By a departure from that sound policy which tries to keep this country a government of laws and not of men the real estate lobby succeeded in obtaining a compromise on the sprinkler controversy in the law, which gives to the Mayor a discretion as to ordering a building to be equipped with sprinklers.

We urge the Mayor to consider his responsibility in this situation.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Quitters

By S. E. KISER

THEY are always full of courage when the ways ahead are clear;
When there's not a sign of trouble, they are free from foolish fear;
You may see them strutting proudly when there's not a cloud in sight;
You may hear them boasting loudly when affairs are going right.
But when bad news is arriving and there's need of manly grit—
When it's time for harder striving—they throw up their hands and quit.

THEY are bold and enterprising when the orders come along;
They will cheer for any plunger while his credit still is strong;
They are always busy buying when the market's on the rise,
And they slap your shoulder, trying to convince you that they're wise,
But when prices take a tumble and it's time for "sitting tight,"
You will see them sprawl and stumble as they turn in sudden flight.

THEY are not mere little fellows—not the puppets on the strings;
You will find them grouped in clusters where
"big men" are running things,
And when everything is easy—business booming everywhere—
They are brave and bold and breezy, and have confidence to spare;
They are not afraid to gamble when it's their game that they play,
But when things get in a scramble they are first to sneak away.

THEY are fearful and complaining—men who thought a while ago
That they had themselves protected from whatever winds might blow;
They are cutting down expenses, and their looks and words are sad;
If they haven't lost their senses, they perform as if they had;
They have lost their former ardor—they who were so "fine and fit"—
When it's time for hitting harder they throw up their hands and quit.

Letters to the Editor

Stirs Fishing Village

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—I applaud your editorial, in a recent issue of the Boston American, criticizing the existing out-of-date railroad terminals in Boston and challenging not only the courage of the men in whom the affairs of the city are intrusted but all Bostonians, as well, to awaken to the needs of civic progress the majority of whom at present are either unenlightened as to what progress has been made elsewhere, in this respect, or else it is a subject that does not carry much interest here.

At any rate one who has visited other large cities finds lacking in Boston that enthusiasm for civic improvement so noticeable in the average citizen of such cities as Chicago, Los Angeles, Denver, and a thousand others. In vain does one peruse the Boston papers in quest of news of municipal or any other improvement.

A man in jail for twenty-five years comes out on the streets of Boston to find them exactly the same in many places as when he had traversed them previously. He might have served a hundred-year sentence—only to find the same buildings, same cobbles, brick sidewalks, etc.

Not so in other communities where old hovels have long since given place to magnificent structures arrayed in long rows on thoroughfares the like of which the majority of Bostonians never live to see. How much would it be necessary to widen Washington street in the shopping district to make it compare favorably with State street, the shopping thorofare of Chicago? Where is Boston's Broadway, such as that famous artery, in New York? Ask this latter question (substituting the name of Boston for any one of a thousand cities) and you will be answered quickly and enthusiastically.

The San Franciscan will point, with pride, to his gladsome Market street vista. What the Clevelander will tell you about his own Euclid avenue would make you feel that "outside of Cleveland, the rest of the world don't matter much."

Now awaken that kind of spirit here in this fishing village and perhaps the time may come in the lives of some of us when it won't be necessary to roam away to get the atmosphere of a model American city, when travelers will stop for a while some fifty or a hundred miles out of Boston while an electric locomotive is hitched on to the train so that Boston (of that day) may be reached in the same manner that a train enters the rival metropolis at the south-western corner of Connecticut.

Let us awaken that spirit! "Civic Pride."

SONG HITS BY FAMOUS WRITING TEAMS

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1920, by Star Company.

WRITERS of popular songs tell me that every cycle of years produces certain very successful "teams" of writers who for a time shed "hits" like a moulting bird sheds feathers, then pass on.

Song writers seem to be something like ball players, boxers and other athletes in that they "go back," losing their skill and punch after a certain period. However, this is true of writers of verse and prose generally and of men in every line of endeavor.

Song writing "teams" are usually formed by accident. One man has the idea and the lyric, but no music, so he finds a melody manufacturer. They produce a "hit," and the result is a "team," which may last for years or through only a number of songs.

Sometimes these combinations are formed in the publishers' offices, sometimes on the stage, in an orchestra or around a clubroom or cafe table. The members of the "team" may be temperamentally uncompanionable and have nothing in common save the ability to write songs together.

One of the great song writing combinations of the past twenty years was William Jerome and Jean Schwartz, the former writing the lyrics and the latter the melody. They produced "Bedelia," "Mister Dooley" and a score of other tremendous "hits" before they finally drifted apart.

Some men, exceptionally gifted, can write both the words and music of their songs and prefer working alone. The "team" of Irving Berlin and Ted Snyder was a famous one a few years ago, but Berlin wrote many of his songs without assistance.

George M. Cohan always works alone, with the possible exception of a little help in arrangement. The ideas of the words and music in his songs are invariably Cohan's. While Cohan has gained his greatest fame as a playright, other song writers to this day place his name first when speaking of the song writers of the present.

Monroe H. Rosenfeld played a lone hand. He wrote "Razzle Dazzle," and "Her Golden Hair Was Hanging Down Her Back" among others. Carrie Jacobs Bond, probably one of the greatest song writing successes of all time from a financial standpoint, not only writes alone, but publishes her own products.

Incidentally, Carrie Jacobs Bond got as high as a dollar a copy for some of her songs, such as "The End of a Perfect Day."

Cole and Johnson, negroes, were a great old-time song writing team. "Under the Bamboo Tree" was only one of their "hits." Hughy Cannon, long since dead, wrote "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home?" and it was one of the song sensations of its time.

Grant Clarke is a type of the present-day free lance lyric writer, who works with different melody writers. Jimmy Hanley is a melody producer, who "teams" with different lyric writers.

Hanley wrote "Rose of Washington Square" with Ballard Macdonald. Now Macdonald is "teamed" again with Harry Carroll, the melody writer, with whom Macdonald wrote "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" before he worked with Hanley.

One of the comparatively new and highly successful "teams" of the present is made up of Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, who wrote "So Long Oolong" and have a number of other "hits" on the market. Before being "teamed" with Ruby, Kalmar, the lyric writer, had a hand in "Oh, What a Pal Was Mary."

Two young chaps got together in Detroit a couple of years ago and wrote "Till We Meet Again." Now Whiting and Egan are among the great song writing "teams" of the day, and recently sent out "Japanese Sandman." Kendis and Brockman, who started with "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" and now have "Feather Your Nest," represent another new combination.

Sam Lewis, Joe Young and Walter Donaldson compose a famous trio of writers, Donaldson writing the music for lyrics by Lewis and Young. You can go few places in this country without hearing echoes of the combination, from "You're a Million Miles From Nowhere" to their latest, "My Mammy."

Gilbert and Sullivan were the granddaddies of the song writing "teams," but it would take several columns of this paper to list the other partnerships that became famous—Harrigan and Hart, Pixley and Luders, Edwards and Cobb, McCarthy and Tierney, the Von Tilzers, and their "team mates," Brown for Albert and Sterling for Harry—and so on.

THE MORAL VALUE OF AMUSING MOVIES

By Spectator

THE old virus of narrowness clings to us. It is still difficult to keep alive a conviction without feeding it on prejudice. Thousands of people still think that convention is the buttress of morality.

As a matter of fact, any man or custom or institution is good or bad because of the heart, the contents and meaning, and not because of reputation.

The moving picture play has suddenly become the most enormous instrument of amusement in the world. Whatever amuses has vast character-forming power.

If the children of Light were as wise in their generation as the children in this world they would seize upon amusements and use them for the betterment of humanity, and not oppose them.

If great harm can be done by moving picture films, then by the same token just as great good can be done by them. They are neither moral or immoral per se, but only as they are made and used.

Things that entertain have more effect upon the morals of a community than things that merely instruct.

The novels of Charles Reade and Charles Dickens did more to abolish many forms of social injustice than any acts of Parliament or any cathedral sermons.

Every intelligent American knows that Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was more effective in arousing a sentiment against human slavery than all the speeches and arguments.

The plays of the famous French Academician, Brieux, showed more people that the wages of sin is death, not only morally but physically, than all the sermons preached on that subject.

Winston Churchill's famous novel, "The Inside of the Cup," which is now presented in moving pictures, will send its moral appeal to thousands who would never be reached in a didactic way. In it the hideousness of hypocrisy and the helpfulness of human kindness are revealed in a manner that grips the consciousness of that vast multitude who could not be swayed by logic.

In fact, it is a question whether didactic instruction as such has ever much moved the world. It may influence the intellect, but the springs of human conduct are not in the mind. They are in the deep underlying instincts, in the passions and emotions that originate all action and that form all habits.

Here is the source of morals and the origin of morals is in the imagination.

If the imagination is debauched the conduct cannot be sincerely good. If the imagination is saturated with right ideals the conduct can never be wholly bad.

And there has never been an agent in the world that so profoundly affects the imagination of a great common people as does the moving picture.

After all, a screen play is but the expression of an idea, and a sermon or a book is no more than this. And an idea that reaches us through the eye in the form of a picture takes hold of us better than one which reaches us through the printed page.

Because we think in pictures more than we do in words.

We dream in pictures.

We grow angry because a picture of some irritating event is called up by our memory or invented by our fancy. We become good because of the wooing influence of some picture that appeals to our faith and courage.

The eye is, without doubt, the most important of all our sensory organs.

When we understand a thing, we say we see it. When we are convinced by an argument, we say we see the point. Thus unconsciously we pay a tribute to the fact that our faculty of sight is the dominating one.

The moving picture, therefore, appeals directly to our most important sense. It smashes through all of our defenses and takes hold upon the heart.

If there is danger in moving pictures, it is because there is danger in the people. But the people are inherently decent, and no appeal to men's baser nature, to lust or profligacy or crime, can be a permanent success as an entertainment.

As time goes on, the great creative minds produce more and more in pictures. For each generation works in its own medium. The artists of the middle ages expressed themselves in cathedrals. Those of the Renaissance spoke in painting and sculpture.

After the invention of printing the great genius of Victor Hugo and William Shakespeare gave their message in words.

The Homer, Dante, Goethe and Hawthorne of the coming generation will tell their stories on the moving picture screen.
